Chap. II. 1623. August. "We were much gratified," wrote the colonists, "on arriving in this country. Here we found beautiful rivers, bubbling fountains flowing down into the valleys; basins of running waters in the flatlands; agreeable fruits in the woods, such as strawberries, walnuts, and wild grapes. The woods abound with venison. There is considerable fish in the rivers; good tillage land; here is, especially, free coming and going, without fear of the naked natives of the country. Had we cows, hogs, and other cattle fit for food—which we daily expect in the first ships—we would not wish to return to Holland."

1628. By the autumn of the year 1628, the village of New Amsterdam, lying close to the fort on the southern point of Manhattan Island, numbered two hundred and seventy souls. Nearly all the settlers who sought to establish themselves at the South and Fresh rivers had returned. Troubles with the Indians had broken up the settlement commenced so hopefully at Orange, and all but a few men left for a garrison had removed to Manhattan. Among others came George de Rapalie, and his wife Catalina Trico, with their daughter Sarah, born at Orange on the ninth day of June, 1625.

The names of George de Rapalie and Catalina Trico are the only names of the Walloon or French colonists brought over by the New Netherland, in 1623, that have been known hitherto. No list of the first settlers of New Amsterdam has come down to us: and no records of the colony, for the first fifteen years of its existence, have been preserved. The earliest council minutes, and other historical documents in the possession of the State of New York, date only as far back as the year 1638; while the registers of the most ancient ecclesiastical body in the state, the Reformed Protestant Dutch Church of New York, commence in 1639. Chap. II 1623–1639.

In the absence of other sources of knowledge, the list of Walloons and Frenchmen presented in July, 1621, to Sir Dudley Carleton, assumes a special interest. Among the sixty names of families desiring to emigrate to America, it would seem highly probable that the names of some, at least, of the thirty families that emigrated to New Netherland less than two years after, might occur. The presumption is strengthened by the evidence that has been given above, showing that meanwhile the project was not abandoned; that the leader of the company that applied to the English government for permission to go to Virginia, afterwards sought the approval of the States-General of Holland: and that within six months of the time when the "New Netherland" sailed for Manhattan, he was engaged in obtaining recruits for the intended colony.

That Jesse de Forest came to America with the band of emigrants he had organized, can scarcely be doubted. In January following the departure of the Walloons for New Netherland, Gerard de Forest, dyer, petitioned the burgomasters of Leyden, representing that his brother, Jesse de Forest, had lately left for the January 24, 1624.

Dear Mrs. Jordan:

Thanks for your efforts on my behalf. One should never trust ones memory when citing genealogical data. I mislead you on the era that I am searching. The correct citation follows:

Johannes (Son of Abraham Van Alstyne and Marretje Jans) bap. 20 Feb 1712, m. Cathalina Rapalje. (All references in New Amsterdam/New York. Van Alstynes moved to Albany and later up the Mohawk river to various points in Schenectaday and Montgomery Counties.) Their Children:

1. Jeronimus,	bap. 11 Feb 1736,	d. 22 Aug 1807
2. Marritje,	bap. 15 Oct 1738
3. Abraham,	bap. 12 Nov 1740	died young
4. Johannes,	bap. 5 Aug 1743	died young
5. Hillitje,	bap. 26 Aug 1744
6. Johannes,	bap. 2 Mar 1746	died young
7. Abraham,	bap. 21 Jun 1747
8. Cathalina,	bap. 5 Jun 1751
9. Johannes,	bap. 15 Jan 1755
10. Elizabeth,	b. 1757

Obviously, the two Abrahams and Marritje are named for Van Alstyne antecedents. This might suggest that Cathalina Rapalje was the daughter of Jeronimus Rapalje and his wife Hillitje based on naming patterns.

Hope this information is of some use to you. This was taken from the published Van Alstyne genealogy and the baptism of 9. Johannes (my line) was confirmed from the church records.

Thanks again.

Sincerely

Henry

Dear Mr. Rennie:

I checked my Rapalje records, trying to find your Catalyntie who married Van Alstin in the 1750's.

Bother of my Catalynties are in the 1600's so I didn't find any help for you at all.

But when I go to the Library next week, I'm going to do some looking and maybe I will be able to turn up somethigg for you.

I hope you benefitted from the NGS Conference, I do know that all of the Friends volunteers were worn to a frage but we had fun, didn't we???

Sorry I couldn't help but I will look for you.

Sincerely,

LINEAGE NUMBER 39: RAPALJE

1. JORIS JANSEN RAPALJE, came from Rochelle, France, to America in 1624, on the Unity. He and his wife, Catalina Trico, who was born in 1605 in Pry, Spanish Netherlands, and who died the 11th of September 1689, are the only Huguenots known by name to have been on the Unity. They were married 21 January 1624. JORIS JANSEN RAPALJE died 1662.

JORIS JANSEN RAPALJE stopped first at Staten Island, then removed to Fort Orange for three years, and then returned to New Amsterdam (New York), where the Rapalje family was influential in the growth of the city.

The eleven children of JORIS JANSEN RAPALJE:

1. SARAH [RAPALJE] (the first white child born in the colony), born 9 June 1625, married (1st) HANS HANSEN BERGEN, (2nd) TUNIS G. BOGERT;

2. MARIA [RAPALJE], born 11 March 1627, married ICHAEL VANDERVOORT;

3. JANETJE [RAPALJE], born 18 August 1628, married REM VANDERBEEK;

4. JUDITH [RAPALJE], born 5 July 1635, married PETER VAN NEST;

5. JAN [RAPALJE], born 28 August 1637, married MARIA FREDERICKSE (LUBERTSON);

6. JACOB [RAPALJE], born 28 May 1639, shot by Indians;

7. CATALINA [RAPALJE], born 28 March 1641, married JEREMIAS WESTERHOUT;

8. JERONIMUS [RAPALJE], born 25 June 1642, married ANNA DENISE;

9. ANNETJE [RAPALJE], born 8 February 1646, married (1st) MARTEN RYERSON, (2nd) JOOST FRANZ, of whom following;

10. ELIZABETH [RAPALJE], born 28 March 1648, married DIRCK HOOGLANDT.

11. DANIEL [RAPALJE], married SARAH KLOCK.

4. JANNEKE RYERSON, born or baptized 21 August 1720, married JOHANNIS S. or JOHN S. VAN WINKLE, the son of JOHANNIS VAN WINKLE and SEITZE HENDRICKSE BANTA, and the grandson of JACOB WALICHS or WALINGEN the founder of the Van Winkle family in the New World. They were married at the southern end of the Acquackanonk Patent area, now the town of Belleville, New Jersey, on 5 December 1746.

Children of JANNEKE RYERSON and JOHANNIS VAN WINKLE:

1. JOHANNIS VAN WINKLE, born 15 July 1747, married (1st) CATHERINE RYERSON, 1 February 1772, married (2nd) MARGERET RYERSON, 1792;

2. SIMEON VAN WINKLE, baptized 24 December 1749, married CATHERINE ROMINE, 25 April 1769;

3. JENNEKE VAN WINKLE, baptized 24 December 1749, married JACOB A. VAN WINKLE, 11 June 1780 (see generation 5, of Lineage 40, following);

1. JORIS JANSEN RAPALJE, came from France to America in 1624 on the ship Unity. He and his wife, CATALINA TRICO, who was born in 1605 in Pry, Spanish Netherlands, and who died the 11th of September 1689, are the only Huguenots known by name to have been on the Unity. They married the 21st of January 1624. Joris Jansen Rapalje died circa 1662. After a short stop at Staten Island, they helped found Fort Orange, now Albany, New York. After a few years they returned to what is now New York City, where the RAPALJE family long were influential in the growth of the city. Joris was a farmer, an innkeeper, and a seaman. He had eleven children.

CATALYNTJE TRICO RAPALJE

By George E. McCracken, Ph.D., F.A.S.G.
Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa

The Rapalje family of New Amsterdam, Albany, and Brooklyn, is the subject of a considerable bibliography: Nathaniel S. Prime, A History of Long Island, etc. (New York 1845), pp. 257-62; Jerome B. Holgate, American Genealogy, etc. (New York 1851), pp. 15-19; James Riker, Annals of Newtown (New York 1852), pp. 267-80; Gabriel Furman, Notes....relating to the Town of Brooklyn, etc. (Brooklyn 1865), p. 99; Teunis G. Bergen, The Bergen Family, etc. (New York, 1st ed., 1866), pp. 12-17 [a second edition, which I have not seen, appeared in 1876]; Teunis G. Bergen, Register....of the Early Settlers of Kings County, etc. (New York 1881), p. 234; Charles Kingsbury Miller, Historic Families of America, etc. (Chicago 1897), pp. 92 f., 97, 100; Anonymous, "Famous New York Families, XXIII: The Rapaljes" (New York Evening Post, 20 July 1901); Genealogical Record of the Saint Nicholas Society (New York 1905), p. 244; Frank Allaben, Ancestry of Leander Howard Crall (New York 1908), pp. 265-98, with an appendix on pp. 391-400; James E. Gibbons, Utah Genealogical and Historical Magazine, 28:9-13; Louis P. DeBoer, Genealogical Magazine of New Jersey, 4:1-10; Proceedings of the Huguenot Society of Pennsylvania, 25:171 f. [this refers to something else in vols. 2-3 of the same periodical]; Sara Morton Koehler, Huguenot Ancestors Represented in the Membership of the Huguenot Society of New Jersey (2nd ed., 1956), p. 62; and on the Walloons in general, Henry G. Bayer, The Belgians, First Settlers in New York and in the Middle States (New York 1925).

Of these the study by Allaben superseded everything done before 1908 and has not been itself superseded by anything printed since then, nor is it likely to be superseded in the future. He convincingly exploded the fantastic claims for a European ancestry which were put forth by Holgate and Miller and were reissued, without knowledge of Allaben, by Gibbons. DeBoer's contribution consists of a collection of isolated data referring to European Rapaljes who may or may not have been related to the American settler, but in any case no proof of a connection was found. Of the other items cited, only Riker and Bergen are relatively free of the grossest error.

In the present article we shall confine ourselves to only two points: first, correction of a common error as to the name of the father of Catalyntje Trico, wife of Joris Janszen Rapalje, and second, consideration of a remarkable statement made by Catalyntje in 1680.

A sufficient number of instances appear in the Dutch manuscript records in which Catalyntje is recorded as Catalyntje Jeronymus to make it certain that her father was named Jeronymus in Dutch or Jérôme in French. Moreover, she gave this name to her eighth child and third son. Yet the majority of the writers cited above state that Catalyntje was daughter of Joris or George, and a few of them give the name as Jan or Jean. One even cites the said Jan as a physician, upon what evidence is unknown. Only Bergen, in the first edition of his Bergen genealogy, correctly states the name. What he gives in the second edition, I do not know, but he favors Joris in his Register, published at the end of his long life. Even the usually careful Allaben makes the error, despite the fact that he transcribes some of the records in which the patronymic appears.

Any future attempt to trace her ancestry should be centered in Paris or Valenciennes and in the year 1605. She deposed on 14 Feb. 1684/5 when her age was given as "fouer score years or thereabouts" [E. B. O'Callaghan, Documentary History of New York (Albany 1850), 3:31; see also H. R. Stiles, History of Brooklyn (1867), 1: 413 f.—the original is in Deed Book VII], and again on 17 Oct. 1688 when her age is given as about 83 years [O'Callaghan, op. cit., 3:32—the original is in New York Colonial Manuscripts XXXV]. In the latter deposition she gives her birthplace as Paris. In a source to be quoted later she is called aged 74 on 30 May 1680. All of these ages are in harmony with a birth about 1605. The last cited source calls her "an old Walloon woman from Valenciennes." It does not state that she was born there and the witness is a person who met her on the day stated and was introduced to her by her nephew. Catalyntje could well have been born in Paris and have been also described in 1680 as from Valenciennes.

The witness just mentioned was Jasper Danckaerts who was then, in company with Peter Sluyter, engaged in a secret mission for the Labadists, seeking a new home in America for the members of that sect. Danckaerts left a journal which was first printed in the Publications of the Long Island Historical Society and again by Bartlett Burleigh James and James Franklin Jameson in the latter's Original Narratives of Early American History (New York 1908). The paragraph in which we are interested appears on pages 234-6 of the latter reference. On 30 May 1680 Danckaerts and Sluyter were taken by their New York friend, Arnold De la Grange, to the Wallabout and paid a visit to De la Grange's aunt.

> "This aunt of de la Grange is an old Walloon woman from Valenciennes, seventy-four years old. She is worldly-minded, with mere bonte, living with her whole heart, as well as body, among her progeny, which now number 145, and will soon reach 150. Nevertheless, she lives alone by herself, a little ap rt from the others, having her little garden and other conveniences, with which she helped herself."

A footnote explains mere bonte as apparently meaning "with mere human goodness" and identifies the old woman as Catalina Trico (1605-1689), widow of Joris Janszen Rapalje. We are also told that Danckaert's friend, the nephew of Catalyntje, was Arnold De la Grange, son of Joost and Margriet De la Grange, and that Margriet married, second, Andrew Carr. De la Grange's wife was Cornelia De la Fontaine, as we learn both from the note and from the baptism of their daughter Cornelia at the Manhattan Dutch Church on 23 April 1681. No success has been had in finding how De la Grange was Catalyntje's nephew but at least Joris Janszen Rapalje had not married a sister of De la Grange's father, so that the said Margriet must have been either sister to Joris Janszen Rapalje or sister to Catalyntje Jeronymus Trico. The Rapaljes, however, named none of their daughters Margriet.

The statement that on 30 May 1680 Catalyntje already had 145 progeny, and would soon have five more, challenges me to attempt to name them! In the list given below, all baptisms are cited from registers of Reformed Dutch churches, and are from the Manhattan church unless stated otherwise. At this period these registers uniformly use New Style dates. Readers should be cautioned that in the later families, not all the known children are included, but only those born before 30 May 1680 or so soon afterwards that Catalyntje could have been told by that date of the expected child. Furthermore, in some instances there is doubt and these are marked with an asterisk. In a few of the families it is possible that there were children born before the cut-off date who were not found, and it may be that there were stillbirths not recorded. Mr. Austin Graybeal of Des Moines has been able to supply a few names missed by me. Early drafts of the article were read by Dr. Herbert F. Seversmith and Professor John Insley Coddington.

138. Jannetje Teunis de Nyse.
139. Femmetje Teunis de Nyse.
140. Sarah Stryker.
141. Jacob Ruthszen.
142. Elsje Fredericks van der Kreest.
143. Hendrick Corszen Vroom.
144. Theodorus Polhemius.
145. Jan Teunisse Denyse.
146. Aris Janse Vanderbilt.
147. Jan Gerritse Dorland.
148. Annetje Theunis.
149. Joseph Hegeman.
150. Marritje Vanderbilt.

In order to make the count come out right, we must ignore Syrachs de Vries, but he was not married to a Rapalje descendant.

QUOD ERAT DEMONSTRANDUM.

NOTES

1. Birth dates in this list appear in Manuscript 81 at the New-York Historical Society and are transcribed from a photostat thereof, not from Allaben's transcript. Though the document appears to be old, the handwriting is not, in my opinion, older then the eighteenth century.

2. She is often credited with being the first child of European parents born within the present borders of New York State, but that honor belongs, rather, to Jean Vinge, born on Manhattan Island in 1614, as Dr. Herbert F. Seversmith has convincingly shown in The National Genealogical Society Quarterly, 35:65-69, and also Allaben (293 f.). What she claimed for herself and undoubtedly was, was that she was the "first Christian daughter" born there.

3. The page is torn and the year is in a later hand. Riker (Annals of Newtown, p. 268) says that he died without surviving issue, and this is correct, for the document cited in Note 1 (cited by Allen, p. 398) states that Jan was "omgebragt by hidens" (killed by heathens). Allaben dates the death ca. 1643, when Jan was about six (p. 287).

4. The page is torn and the year is in a later hand. The document says she was "Sonden Errgenamegestoven" (without issue). She married Jeremiah Westenhout but both d.s.p. (see Collections of the New-York Historical Society, Wills: 1:341).

5. Note the closeness of the next baptism. Both Bergen and Allaben claim that Jacob was Catalyna's twin, and it has been suggested to me that one of the twins was ill and was baptized separately. If so, one would suppose the sick child would be baptized earlier.

6. The interval between this baptism and the preceding is so short as to raise serious doubt as to whether they were children of the same parents. The sponsors for Catalyna's baptism were Aert Willemszen and wife, not members of the Rapalje or Bergen families, so far as known. When Sarah Bogaert petitioned for additional land on 4 April 1656, after her marriage to Bogaert, she alluded only to seven, not eight children of her deceased husband Bergen. Those who assume, with Allaben, that Catalyna was a child of Sarah, must also believe, with him, that she had died. He points out (p. 293) that there is no further trace of her.

7. Surely a doubtful case, not listed by Allaben. A sponsor at the baptism of the child was Pieter Janszen Bogart.

8. Though the baptismal record seems to show a male, this is very probably a female, later called Machtelt, at the baptism of whose children sponsors were from the Rapalje family. She cannot have been an earlier child, not recorded, since the mother was only fifteen at marriage, nor can she have been a child of Michiel Pauluszen Van der Voort by a former marriage, since his marriage record shows him as previously a bachelor.

9. Bergen supposes that she married Volckert Hendricksen. If this be Volckert Hendricksen Bries, then he is wrong.

10. Birth dates without baptisms in this list are from Henry A Stoutenbourgh's History of the Oyster Bay Dutch Church (1903), p. 13. In our copy of this work is a slip announcing a pamphlet on the Remsen family of Oyster Bay which has not been found. It should be pointed out that it is surprising that not more grandchildren of this couple were found.

11. Probably, not certainly, New Style.

12. Allaben (p. 295) shows that he was living in 1741, aet. 77.

13. The document cited in Note 1 says: "gis gestoven Sonden Errgenam" (died without issue), but they did have a son and one only, since Maria Fredericks married, second, at Brooklyn, 14 Oct. 1663, Symon Hansen.

14. The children of this couple also appear in the document.

15. Allaben transcribes the document as saying bapt. 5 May 1671. We follow the printed transcript of the register, as his information may pertain to the birth.

16. Allaben has bapt. 4 Dec. 1673.

17. Allaben has bapt. 5 Oct. 1676.

18. We follow here Daniel Hoogland Carpenter, History and Genealogy of the Hoogland Family (1891), p. 165. Baptisms have not been found.

19. See above, Note 8. It is surprising that no more baptisms were found.

20. We follow here a very poor account by John Dorland Cremer, Records of the Dorland Family in America (Washington 1898), pp.

42, 167, 169. It also includes a child Maritje, bapt. 11 April 1672, place not stated. We eliminate her, as Maritie, daughter of Lambert Janssen Dorland and Hermetie Pieters, was baptized at Brooklyn on 19 April 1672, and we conclude that Mr. Cremer erred on this point.

21. Mr. Carpenter (loc. cit.) implies that this child was illegitimate and by Syrachs de Vries. We include the child because we think that a great-grandmother who would stand sponsor for an illegitimate great-grandchild would certainly not omit this child from a count of her progeny.

Editor's Note.—The above article is different from the "general run" of articles on genealogical subjects, and while some may feel this is something in the nature of a "stunt" to attempt to identify the progeny claimed by Catalyntje Trico Rapalje in 1680, Dr. McCracken's bibliography, his general comments, and many of his specific notes should be helpful to all who in the future may work on these family groups. It seems likely that Catalyntje did include the "in-laws" in her count of 145, but I think she was including only living progeny, and since a few of those in Dr. McCracken's list had died before 1680, quite probably there are still a few names unlocated as yet. —D.L.J.

ABIGAIL ARNOLD, WIFE OF SOLOMON[3] BLAKE OF DORCHESTER, MASS.

By Mrs. John E. Barclay, F.A.S.G., Whitman, Mass.

Solomon[3] Blake, son of Edward[2] (William[1]), of Dorchester, Mass., baptized at Milton, Mass., 5 July 1681, may have been born as early as 1674 before the records of that town begin. He died at Boston near 25 Aug. 1741, date his will was probated [Suffolk Probate, 35: 472]. He was married at Boston, 24 Aug. 1704, to Abigail Arnold "by Samuel Eells, Esq." No records of her birth or death have been found.

By his will he bequeathed to her all of his estate in Boston both real and personal, so long as she should remain his widow; also his negro woman Flora and her three children; all household goods, improvement of house, shop and wharf where he dwells; but if she marry again, £100 of his estate and quitting the house; bequests to sons Joseph and William and grandson Solomon Russell; property bought of Samuel Wentworth to his wife with permission to sell, if need be, but if not, then after her decease to his two daughters, Abigail Holder and Elizabeth Russell to make up their full portion with what they had at marriage. After her decease.

Fantelina Joy and Her Husbands

BY NEIL D. THOMPSON

It often happens that the labors of the genealogist will articulate the dry bones of a story which might engage the novelist's imagination. Three years ago I noted in the pages of this journal (TAG supra 45:34) an appearance in 1714 in the county court of Charles County, Maryland, by my ancestor Fantelina or Fantalena Jenkins, and requested further information concerning her and her family. More recent researches among the records of the county, housed at the Hall of Records in Annapolis, have answered some questions while raising others. The many courtesies of the staff of the Hall of Records and the suggestions of Mr. George Ely Russell were of assistance to me in the development of this problem.

The source of the unusual given name of Fantelina remains unknown to me, as does the parentage of the lady herself, who makes her first appearance in the court and land records of Charles County (hereafter abbreviated CCR) at the end of 1691 as Fantelina Joy. The surname Joy is not found in the county prior to that date, nor has it been possible to establish a connection by birth or marriage with the family of that name in neighboring St. Mary's County, where the local records of the period are missing. Because the only male Joy in the county records prior to 1740 makes his appearance at a later date than Fantelina, it is assumed that Fantelina Joy arrived in the county either unmarried or a widow, perhaps with a child or children.

In any event, Fantelina Joy was presented by the county's grand jury to the county court on 8 March 1691/2 for having borne a bastard child (CCR R:369). Apparently she failed to appear and Sheriff Humphrey Warren was ordered to find her and bring her in on 13 June 1693. The following month, 12 July 1693, one Gilbert Clarke, a planter and sometime Sheriff, gave bond for her appearance but she again defaulted on 8 Aug. 1693 (CCR S:130). There is set forth at length the fact that the Provincial Court, having general jurisdiction throughout the colony, had issued a writ to Gilbert Clarke and Fantelina Joy directing them to appear at the May term of that Court but that the colony's Attorney General had suggested to the Sheriff that he refrain from serving the writ "to see whether the Justices of this Court would take any notice of ye

and
Catelyntje Jeronimus Trico of Pry

ARRANGED BY GEORGE E. McCRACKEN

Joris Janzsen Rapelje and his wife Catelyntje Jeronimus Trico are among the best known of the early settlers of early New Amsterdam, having been the parents of the first born female of European parentage in what is now New York State. A considerable bibliography might be cited on this pair, but here we shall only present certain new information which has in the last decade come to light.

For long it was believed that Catelyntje was born in Paris, France, and, indeed, this old error was restated as recently as April 1971 in a letter to the editor of The Colonial Genealogist (Vol. 3, No. 4, New Series, p. 258), apropos of an article by Col. L. A. Bryan in the preceding issue (Vol. 3, No. 3, New Series, January 1971, p. 158) where the error is not made. The origin of the error is to be found in a deposition made by Catelyntje on 17 Oct. 1688 (printed in E. B. O'Callaghan, Documentary History of New York [1850] 3:32; also in Frank Allaben, Ancestry of Leander Howard Crall (New York 1908), p. 391; the deposition is from New York Colonial Manuscripts, vol. 35. This begins "Catelyn Trico aged about 83 years born in Paris."

In March 1961 when the distinguished genealogist, John Insley Coddington, was in Amsterdam, he was informed by Dr. Simon Hart of the Gemeinte Archief that Catelyntje was actually born in the tiny hamlet of Pry, 50° 17' North latitude, 4°26' East longitude, on the Herve River directly south of Charleroi in Hainault. It is obvious that when Catelyntje said "Pry," the English-speaking clerk who took down the deposition misunderstood her to be pronouncing "Paris" as the French pronounce it, an easy error if she rolled the "r" very strongly. This important information was printed soon after in the News-Letter of the American Society of Genealogists, but as that periodical is not available outside the Society, the information did not become generally known.

Before passing to additional new material, let me say that the name of the father of Catelyntje must have been Jérôme or some form of that name, since when she is recorded with a patronymic, it is regularly Jeronimus, a name repeated among descendants many times. The surname Trico has an Italian appearance but I have long been convinced that it should be something like Tricot, Tricaud, Tricault, Tricaut. Whatever his name ally should be, it is unfortunate that descendants of e Rapeljes have generally ignored Jeronimus, the only iter known to me who makes any mention of him being rgen in his Bergen Genealogy, not in his Register of Settlers of Kings County.

We now come to fresh information kindly supplied Mr. Hendrik O. Slok, the very able and also very cky Dutch expert at the Genealogical Society in Salt ke City, to whom we also owe new data concerning the rebears of two of the three Van Horn families. From crofilm 113.191, Amsterdam Dutch Reformed Church Marage Intentions he quotes the following:

ris Raparlie Den 13 January 1624 [New Style] Compareerden alsvoren Joris Raparlie van Valenchieratwercker out 19 Jaeren woon- op 't Waelepadt & atharina triko van pris in Walslant geasst- met mary a[m]egh haar suster woon- in de Vles out 18 Jae- Translation: Appeared as before Joris Raparlie from alenciennes boratworker age 19 Years residing on 't aelepadt & Catherina triko from pris in Walslant acmpanied by mary Fla(m)engh her sister residing in the lask age 18 Years.]

re we get the banns of the marriage, the ages of the uple and their birthplaces and the occupation of Jor-, which Mr. Slok does not identify. I suggest that means weaver of a certain kind of cloth which in ench is called "bure."

Mr. Slok thinks that the witness Marie Flamengh y be the same person as listed in the following two tries (he favors the first):

Microfilm 113.188: 13 June 1615. Appeared . . . illipe de Fonteijn de Wikkart from Vallenchijn, bortworker aged 22 years 3 years residing on the Nieu emarkt [New Oxenmarket] In the Hoefijsers [horseje] street, accompanied by his brother Jehan de Fontjne de wickart, & Marie Flamen by Valencijn age 21 ars residing in the Nes accompanied by Zacharias men her uncle on the other side.

signed Jacque tesse

e Walloon Church at Amsterdam lists (113.402) an entry for the first couple:

Fiances le 13e Juin 1615 Espouses le 5e Juillet 1615	Philippes de la fonteinne dit Wicart natif de Valenciennes, bourrasier, demeurant sur le nouveau marche- aux boen ... Marije Flamen demeurante an ness.

Whether either of these two marriages pertains to the sister of our Catelyntje, it is obvious that the difference in surname of the two sisters suggests that they were half-sisters.

As for Joris himself, Mr. Slok provides the results of some research made in 1960 by M. P. de Saint-Aubin, Archiviste of the Department of Nord, France. In view of the fact that some Protestants were forced to christen their children in the Roman Catholic Church, the following entry may be significant:

Roman Catholic Church of St. Nicholas, Valenciennes: 1604 28 avril. Georges Rapareilliet, illegitimus fils de Jean Rapareillet, susceptor [godfather] Noe Vasseur, susceptrix [godmother] Jehenne de latre.

The date, the place and the two first names are what we want, and the spelling of the surname is possible.

M. Saint-Aubin also states: "Searches to establish the origin of Catharine Trico are next to impossible. We have only R. Catholic records which begin late in the 1600's, no notarial records. The Archives in Northern France are in bad shape in contrast with the south. We have registers of confiscation of property of the Protestants but they ante-date Catharina's birth by 30 years-1569."

It is obvious that we have come to the end of our resources for research on Catelyntje's forebears, but we can be glad that the trail did not lead to Paris, for understand that the records of the French capital are largely non-existant also.

RAPALJE

RELIGIOUS forces are potent factors in the breaking up of old and in the establishment of new communities. The wars between the Romanists and Huguenots of France are an interesting exemplification of this fact, especially to an American student. The revocation of the Edict of Nantes drove tens of thousands of the Reformed faith into more liberal countries, and of these a considerable portion crossed the Atlantic and settled in the Dutch colonies of America, where they soon became a large and influential element in the community.

Among the first settlers in the New Netherlands, was Joris Janès de Rapalie, a noble Huguenot of La Rochelle, France, better known under the Dutch form of his name, Jan Joris Rapaelje. His family had been distinguished in the history of Brittany from the middle of the eleventh century. In this romantic province they owned large estates, and were famous for their valor and patriotism. Many of them took part in the Crusades, while others achieved distinction in the French wars at home and abroad. They were among the first converts to the Reformed faith, and paid the usual penalty for their non-conformity. Some were killed, while the majority were forced to flee to Switzerland, Belgium, and Holland.

Jan Joris, Founder

Joris was among those who escaped to Holland. Here he remained a short time, and then, with a company of venturous men and women, he took passage in the ship Unity of the Dutch West India Company, and arrived in New Amsterdam in 1623, being one of the earliest settlers. He stayed a short while at New Amsterdam, and then went to Fort Orange, now Albany. Here he remained three years, and returned to New Amsterdam, where he lived until 1637. In June of that year he bought a large tract of land from the Indians on the Long Island side of the East River, and there made his permanent home. The tract was of 335 acres, and included a large part of what was called the Wallabout. He was a man of high integrity, and a few years after his arrival in Brooklyn he was made a magistrate. He married Catalina Trico, daughter of Joris Trico of Paris, by whom he had eleven children: Sarah [1625], Marritje [1627], Jannetje [1629], Judith [1635], Jan [1637], Jacob [1639,] Catalyntje [1641], Jeronimus [1643], Annetje [1646], Elizabeth [1648], and Daniel [1650].

Sarah, the First Girl

Of these Sarah, the eldest, was the first female child born in the New Netherlands. In honor of this fact, the authorities presented her with a tract of land on the Wallabout adjacent to her father's farm. Sarah was a woman of great talent and physical vigor, and during her long life was the acknowledged social head of Brooklyn. She was twice married, her husbands being Hans Hansen Bergen and Tunis Gysbert Bogaert. By these unions she had fourteen children, becoming thereby the maternal ancestress of the Bergen and Bogart families of Long Island.

Jeronimus

Jeronimus, in the second generation, was a man of prominence in both New York and Brooklyn. He was a farmer and merchant, Justice of the Peace, and a deacon of the Brooklyn Church. He owned several small craft, with which he supplied the market of New York with produce, and turned an honest penny by carrying freight for his neighbors. He accumulated considerable property, and left his children well provided for. His wife was Anna, daughter of Tunis Denys, by whom he had six sons and three daughters.

Daniel, the youngest child of Joris, was a man of high character and of a strong religious nature. He took comparatively little interest in public affairs, but devoted his time and wealth to church work. He was an elder of the Brooklyn Church the larger part of his life, and made it a point of duty to visit regularly all the places of worship belonging to his denomination. The church records of that period speak of him in very high terms, and ascribe the prosperity of his denomination largely to his generous aid. He married Sarah Klock, daughter of Abraham Klock, by whom he had six children.

Daniel the Devout

In the third generation were several male members of ability and influence. Tunis [1671], son of Jeronimus, was active and versatile, having been a farmer, stock-raiser, merchant, and sheep-owner. He was an enthusiastic churchman, and served as deacon of the Brooklyn Church for many years. He married Sarah Van Vechten, by whom he had seven children.

Tunis the Deacon

Jacob [1679], son of Jeronimus, married Sarah Brinckerhoff, daughter of Abraham Brinckerhoff, by whom he had a large family. He settled in Raritan, N. J., where he founded the New Jersey branch of his race.

Cornelius [1690] married Joanna Antonides, daughter of the Rev. Vincentius Antonides, by whom he had many daughters, nearly all of whom grew up and married advantageously. He resided in New York, and from his branch came the Rapaljes who married into the New York families of that period.

Jeronimus [1682] was a prosperous land-owner, shipper, and merchant, who was active in religious and philanthropic affairs, and who served twenty-five years as a trustee of the town of Brooklyn. He took delight in good roads and bridges, and was marked by great fidelity to his trusteeship. He married Hilletie Van Vechten, daughter of Hendrick Van Vechten, by whom he had five children.

Jeronimus, Town-trustee

Daniel, son of Daniel [1691], settled in Newtown, where he established the Queens County branch of the family. He married Aletie Cornell, daughter of Johannes Cornell, by whom he had ten children. He was a prosperous farmer, and founded an estate which grew to large proportions, under the management of his descendants.

In the fourth generation, the male descendants began to change from agricultural to mercantile pursuits. In the meantime, the growth of Brooklyn and New York had enhanced the value of farm property and of garden produce, so that nearly all the sons were quite well to do. George, son of Tunis, bought property in Bedford, which was then developing into a very prosperous village. He improved it, so that its value almost doubled during his lifetime. He married Elizabeth Remsen, daughter of Joris Remsen, by whom he had five children—Sarah [1722], George [1724], Tunis [1726], Rem [1728], and Phœbe [1731].

Jeronimus and his brother Derrick (sons of Jeronimus) followed their uncle Jacob and migrated to New Jersey, settling first at Raritan and afterwards at Brunswick. Each married, the former having two sons, Cornelius and Tunis, and the latter, George and Jeronimus.

Daniel, son of Daniel, was the thriftiest member of the family. He was very successful in business, and eight years after his father died bought the paternal estate at Newtown. He managed it with prudence and amassed great wealth. He was a magistrate of the town, and held many positions of honor and trust in the ecclesiastical, commercial, legal, and social world.

About this time the conflict of English and Dutch spelling brought about a curious change of the name. Heretofore it had been spelled Rapalie; now, on account of slurs cast upon the Dutch Knickerbockers, the family adopted the Holland spelling. They could not agree, however, upon the form, and no less than three versions appeared. The largest number accepted Rapalje, while two other groups employed Rapaelje and Rapelje respectively. The French particle of place, "de," was now omitted altogether.

Folkert [1719], son of Tunis, resided at Cripplebush, and devoted himself to horticulture. He married Matilda Polhemus, daughter of Cornelius Polhemus, by whom he had one son and three daughters.

In the fifth generation, Major Daniel [1748], son of Johannes and grandson of Daniel, was a brave Revolutionary soldier. Upon the breaking out of the war he took up arms, served as lieutenant during the conflict, and reached the rank of major at its close. The British holding the western end of Long Island, he was compelled to fly the country, and did not see his home until after the British troops had evacuated New York. He married Agnes Bergen, daughter of Johannes Bergen, and had a large farm at New Lots. His children were John, Daniel, Samuel, and Michael.

Major Daniel

From this branch are descended several men of distinction. His grandson, Williamson, was a skilful portrait painter and a prosperous man of affairs. His great-grandson, Daniel [1836], was educated at Rutgers, and after graduation entered the theological department and took orders. As soon as he was ordained he offered his services to the Foreign Missionary Society, which sent him to the Amoy Mission, in China, of the Reformed Church in America. Here he labored for over thirty years, building up a large and faithful congregation of Chinese converts. The work accomplished by Dr. Rapalje and his heroic assistants borders on the marvellous. When he went there in the early sixties, the place was the most notoriously evil on the China coast. Superstition was rife, and the Tong-An district, just back of the city of Amoy, had supplied pirates to the China Sea from time immemorial.

Williamson, Artist

Daniel the Evangelist

The good doctor determined upon invading the latter field. He organized all the missionaries of the district into a compact whole and assigned to each a specific duty. He established preaching centres throughout the large territory and placed several at the more important points among the rough populace of Tong-An. For many years the task seemed fruitless, and then it began to bring forth a harvest. Chapels, schools, and, finally, churches, were founded. In 1890, the turbulent district had become quiet and orderly, and the evangelists found themselves supported by fifty native exhorters of ability and courage. Then began the foundations of a college on the Island of Kulang-Su, and, in 1895, several hundred children attended the schools of Dr. Daniel and his associates.

Rem [1728], the son of George, took up mercantile life in New York, which he made his residence. Here he amassed a handsome fortune, and finally retired from business and settled in Pelham. He married Ellen Hardenbrook, by whom he had issue.

George the Scholar

His son George [1771] was graduated from Columbia in 1791, and admitted to the bar in 1794. He had a large practice, but finally confined his work to the management of his estate, especially after 1805, when his father died, leaving him a fortune. He was a man of strong literary tastes, and devoted his leisure to travel and study. He published many monographs upon special topics, and, in 1834, a volume upon his travels. He married Susan Eliza Provost, daughter of Bishop Provost.

George B., grandson of George, who was a grandson of Joris, was a famous character in his time, and was noted for his strange ill-luck. His grandfather, George, was drowned in New York Bay in 1781, his cousin George in 1795, and his uncle George, in 1799, met a similar fate. This singular coincidence of a man, his son, and grandson, each bearing the same name and meeting the same doom, attracted great attention. George B. was a talented business man and prospered from the first. In his youth he fell in love with a very beautiful girl named Miss Sherred, and became affianced to her. A month before the wedding-day she fell sick, and died on the very night she was to have been married. From that time on the young merchant was a changed man. He gave up all society, especially that of women, and found his solace in the excitement of trade. He lived amid the humblest surroundings in order to accumulate wealth, and invested his gains with great shrewdness. Before his death he owned numerous houses and lands between Thirtieth and Fortieth Streets, Eighth and Eleventh Avenues. His cousin, George Bernard [1784], was a merchant of high standing and wealth in the first half of the nineteenth century.

In the sixth generation, George, the son of Daniel, grandson of John, was distinguished as a merchant and philanthropist. He was a moving spirit in the charities and church organizations of the early part of the nineteenth century. He married Sarah Elizabeth Staples, by whom he had: Ellen Maria, George Augustus—who was educated for the Protestant Episcopal Church, but died before he was ordained,—Sarah Elizabeth, and Henry Staples, architect, who is the head of the present branch of the family in New York.

George the Philanthropist

In the seventh generation, Jacob [1788] commands attention. He began his business life as a clerk in New York, where his energy and courtesy soon made him liked by his employers. At the outbreak of the War of 1812, he enlisted and became a lieutenant of artillery. He made a good record as a soldier, and the regimental order-books which he wrote are still in existence and bear testimony to his administrative ability. At the close of the war he started business in Charleston, S. C., where, in 1816, he was appointed Deputy Secretary of State. In 1825, he returned to Brooklyn, where he soon became a leader in the City Council.

Lieutenant Jacob

He labored for the widening and improving of Atlantic Avenue, and advocated the present South Ferry. In 1837, he invented a machine with which he proposed to clean the streets of New York. His invention was far ahead of the age. It did the work well, but it aroused the fierce enmity of the street sweepers of the time, who formed a mob, chased the inventor a mile, and destroyed the machine. It was fully twenty years before his idea was taken up and made a part of the street-cleaning equipment. In the forties, with Cornelius J. Bergen and Alexander Bergen, he started a movement which resulted in the laying out of Carroll Park and the reclamation of the marsh lands in South Brooklyn.

This measure changed what before had been an unhealthful territory into a fashionable neighborhood and paved the way for the Erie Basin and the great manufacturing establishments which now are so striking a characteristic of that part of the borough. He developed the district of Newtown known as Laurel Hill, and gave it its poetic name. With J. S. T. Stranahan he was one of the first to advocate the establishment of Prospect Park, and lived to see the first steps taken towards the realization of that project. He married Elizabeth Van Mater, by whom he had seven children. Of his sons, the eldest, Gilbert Van Mater, became a prominent citizen of Staatsburgh, Dutchess County, and the youngest, Augustus, remained in New York and Brooklyn.

More than thirty of the family have been prominent merchants in the metropolis, and during the Civil War over eighty espoused the cause of the Union. The Rapaljes are notable for the vigor of their members, the large size of their families, and the preponderance of male over female issue. In this respect they tower over the other old families of the State with but one exception, the Schencks. The strength and health of the race is accompanied or manifested by lightheartedness and geniality. This is modified by a strong religious nature, which expresses itself in enthusiastic church work. More than one hundred and fifty Rapaljes have been deacons, vestrymen, and trustees in the churches of the Greater New York. In the beginning, they were stalwart pioneers, and assisted in the settlement of at least fifty towns in New York and New Jersey. In their next stage, they were skilful farmers, graziers, and carriers. In the third, they were able merchants, owners of real estate, clergymen, and professional men. In peace, they have always striven for local improvements and municipal reform, and in war, they have been active supporters of the nation. They have cared little for office or title, finding their chief joy in the performance of their duty — domestic, social, and civil.

Joris Jansen de Rapelyé (Georges de Rapallier) immigrated from Valenciennes, Spanish Netherland to New York on the ship "New Netherland" in 1624. He was accompanied by his wife, Catalina Trico (Tricault), also a French Huguenot and a member of the famous family of weavers who invented "Trico" cloth very much in use to the present day. Sara, their first-born, was the first white child born in New York. Joris was the grandson of Gaspard Colet de Rapallier of Chatillon-sur-Loire, France, an infantry colonel in the French Army under kings Francis I and Henry II of Navarre; and, of French nobility dating back to the Crusades. Joris was also a grand nephew of Admiral Gaspard de Coligny (Marquis de Chatillon), who was murdered during the Massacre of St. Bartholomew's Night in 1572. The Admiral's daughter, Louise, was married to William the Silent of the House of Nassau, whose great-grandson, William of Orange, was crowned King of England in 1688. The de Rapelyé Arms: azure, three bars or; the Crest: issuing from a ducal coronet or, on a high hat of dignity azure, three bars of the first, the hat surmounted with six ostrich feathers or and azure. The Founding Families of New Netherland

No. 4. — THE RAPALJE-RAPELJE FAMILY, Part I.

by George Olin Zabriskie, Fellow of the American Society of Genealogists.

Detailed account given of Joris Rapalje and his wife Catalina Trico, based on original records of early 17th century.

EARLY in January, 1624, a youthful Walloon couple must have watched with absorbed interest the bustling waterfront scene in Amsterdam as the ship Eendracht (Unity) was made ready for a long voyage. They had been recruited together with a number of families, mostly Walloons, to sail aboard the vessel as an advance party of colonists for the West India Company's lands in far off America. The two young people, Joris Janszen Rapalje and Catalina Jeronimus Trico (as they later became known in New Netherland), had agreed to join the group subject to one condition, namely, that they could arrange to be married before the ship sailed.

Little time remained to them, for the departure date was drawing near and marriage in Holland took a good deal of time. Normally, after a couple notified the civil authorities of their intent to wed the action was followed by the proclamation of banns on the next three Sundays, in the church or churches to which they belonged, before the marriage could take place. Joris and Catalina registered their intention on Saturday, January 13, 1624 (New Style). They became man and wife in the Walloon Church at Amsterdam on the second Sunday, January 21, one week earlier than normal and doubtless with an assist from the Amsterdam Chamber of the Company.

In the marriage-intention registry the entry about them reads, with various abbreviations and deletions, in Dutch and English as follows:

Joris Raparlie van Valenchie . . / boratwercker out 19 jaeren woon . . op 't Waele / padt & Catharina triko van [word parijs crossed out] pris in / [word Vranckrijck crossed out] Walslant geasst . . met mary Fla[m]egh / haar suster woon . . in de Vles out 18 jar . .
(Signed with their marks)

Joris Raparlie, born in Valenchie . ., borat worker, age 19 years, living at the Waele padt, and Catharina Triko, born in [word "Paris" deleted] pris, in [word "France" deleted] Walslant, assisted by Mary Flamegh, her sister, living in de Vles, age 18 years.

Omitted from this record are several items of information customarily included to indicate, for example, duration of residence, and present marital status (we may safely assume that neither party was previously married). Since both were minors, the omission of parental approval suggests that neither had parents residing in Amsterdam or still living. And as Joris was not "assisted" by anyone, he may not have had a male relative in Amsterdam.[1]*

Their marriage record at the Walloon Church in Amsterdam reads in French as follows: "Espousé le 21 de Janvier [1624] Joris Raporbie de Valencenne, et Caterine triko." Thus we note that Joris was born at Valenciennes in Hainaut, a province at that time in the southern part of the Spanish Netherlands. The region has been in the Département du Nord of France since 1668.[2]

From the patronymic used by Joris in New Netherland we know that his father was Jan (in Dutch) or Jean (in French or Walloon) Raparlie, or similar spelling. Alleged ancestries for Joris have been published in several versions, practically all of them "built upon the sands of tradition instead of a solid foundation of documentary evidence." This is especially true of the account which uses the folklore-stereotype of three brothers coming to America, as conceived and delineated by General Jeremiah Johnson more than a century ago.

Based on the report made by a French researcher in 1960, it seems apparent that Joris was baptized Georges Rapareillet on April 28, 1604, in the Church of St. Nicholas at Valenciennes as the natural son of Jean Rapareillet. The record does not list the mother's name. Baptism of a Protestant child in a Catholic church was not unusual at that time as it helped avoid persecution.[3] No further particulars about Joris have been found in the Amsterdam and Leyden church records and those of the Bibliotheque Wallonne on microfilms at the Genealogical Society in Salt Lake City, or that support assertions that his surname was originally "de Rapalje."

Unfortunately the marriage entry does not reflect a second version of Catalina's birthplace (as it did for Joris) to assist in its identification. "Pris Walslant," her place of birth as plainly written on the intention document in place of the crossed out words "Paris, France," has not been identified, except that it was in Wallonia. Phonetically the word "Pris" is similar to parijs; both names have much the same "ee" terminal sound. The site was likely a farm or some rural locality. In 1961, John I. Coddington listed it as "Pry," due south of Charleroi; also, there was a farming area spelled "Pres," northwest of Charleroi. These locations are in present Hainaut, a Walloon province in Belgium.

Little has been found regarding the family named Trico, as variously spelled, in filmed copies of the old Dutch and Walloon records at Salt Lake City. As the 1960 report from France points out, "Searches to establish the origin of Catharine Trico are next to impossible . . .", due to the sparseness of records in northern France. However, there are two records which provide at least a few clues to her family and place of birth.

When the two Labadists, Jasper Danckaerts and Peter Sluyter, visited New York in 1680 a man named De La Grange (given name presumably Arnoldus) and his wife Cornelia de Fonteijn took Danckaerts to the Wallabout on May 30 to visit "his" aunt, Catalina Trico, "an old Walloon woman from Valenciennes, seventy-four years old." From this we can assume that Catalina's birthplace or early home at "Pris" was near Valenciennes. This gains support from the marriage-intention paper of Mary Flamegh, the "sister" (in reality a half-sister) who assisted Catalina at the registry office, that shows Mary was a native of Valenciennes.[4]

Records at Amsterdam disclose that on July 5, 1615 (intention and first banns dated June 13), Philippe de Fonteijn de Wikkat and Mary were married in the Walloon Church. Both were born in Valenciennes; he was 22, she 21. The intention document, which both of them signed, indicates that he was assisted by his brother Jehan de fonteijne de Wickart, and she by her uncle, Zacherias Flamen. Absence of a notation about parental approval may indicate that Mary's parents were dead in 1615. Cornelia de Fonteijn, wife to De La Grange, was probably a daughter of the Carel Fonteijn who came to New Amsterdam in 1658 and lived for years in Bushwick, now part of Brooklyn. Pending a study of the De La Grange and De Fonteijn families, we assume that Carel was the son of Mary Flamegh and nephew of Catalina Trico, thus making Catalina the great-aunt of Mrs. De La Grange.[5]

The marriage of Joris and Catalina on January 21, 1624, permitted them to sail four days later, Thursday, January 25, on board the Eendracht, Adrian Joriszen Tienpont (or Thienpont), skipper. Their fellow passengers included Sebastian Janszen Krol, John Monfort and his wife Jacqueline Moreau, about a dozen other families, probably also Walloons with marriageable daughters and perhaps several sons, together with about 30 unaccompanied men (seamen and soldiers), some of whom may have been Walloons.[6]

A long series of momentous events in Europe had preceded and led to this first sailing of colonists to New Netherland. Early in the previous century, and coincident with the rise of the Reformation, the Spanish sovereign became by inheritance the absolute ruler over a flourishing region to the north that roughly consisted of the present Netherlands, Belgium, Luxemburg and northern France. As the leading Catholic power, Spain, through two successive monarchs, Charles V and his son Philip II, sought to prevent the spread of the new faith by oppressive measures and outright persecution. Philip's coercive methods, including use of the Spanish Inquisition, became so harsh that the provinces rebelled in 1568, thus commencing a war for independence that lasted 80 years.

Although at first the Spanish tercios were victorious everywhere, the tide turned and by the year 1600, with the Spaniards ousted from Dutch soil and their army crushed at the battle of Nieuport, the Netherlands won de facto recognition as an independent nation even though the war would continue sporadically until 1648. In 1579 the seven northernmost provinces had united in political federation and two years later declared themselves free of Spanish rule as the Republic of the United Provinces of the Netherlands. William of Orange, surnamed the Silent, was the heart and soul of the Dutch revolt and through his leadership the States General came to direct the destinies of a new and vigorous commonwealth. The southern provinces remained under Spanish control.

The Spanish persecutions had caused widespread migrations from all of the Netherlands to England, Scandinavia, the German states along the Rhine, Switzerland, and to some extent to France. After the formation of the Dutch republic, many of these people from the northern provinces returned home. At the same time thousands of the migrant Flemish and Walloons removed to the Netherlands from England, the Germanies and elsewhere. In addition, migrations from the Spanish Netherlands continued for many years.

As a result of these developments the Spanish Netherlands stagnated while the Dutch Republic prospered. Holland's "Golden Age" began in the arts, sciences and commerce. Amsterdam became the leading trade cente of Europe and Holland its foremost maritime power.

In 1609, at the initiative of Spain, now a suitor an no longer the arbiter of Europe's destinies, the Twelv Years Truce was negotiated that gave the Dutch op portunity to further extend their maritime and com mercial operations throughout the world. That sam year Henry Hudson, an Englishman employed by th Dutch East India Company, explored the river name for him in America. He was soon followed by Dutch explorers and traders. From 1615 to 1618 the State General granted several short-term charters to merchant seeking to exploit the fur trade in New Netherland afterward there ensued a period of free trade.

As the Truce ended, in 1621, the States General char tered the West India Company with a 24-year mo nopoly of navigation and trade on the eastern coas and adjacent islands of North and South America, an along the west coast of Africa south of the Tropic o Cancer.[7] Although its charter took effect from July 1621, the Company did not become fully organize and operational for two years. Plans made during th hiatus enabled an enterprising Huguenot refugee, Jes de Forest, and ten other heads of Walloon families Leyden, to sail in the ship Pigeon from Amsterdam o sterdam, while insisting that so long as they were there, it was the deacons' responsibility to see that they had sufficient food and clothing. In these same years he successfully opposed the official formation of a Lutheran congregation in the town. A child of his time, Megapolensis believed that there should be no official break in the religious unity of the colony, even though as a Dutchman he was quite willing to tolerate any man's private opinions.

Also, he misnamed Joris as Jan Jo Rapalje. Louis P. de Boer's article in Genealogical Magaz of New Jersey, IV (July 1928), pp.1-10, used material fro the Index and records of the Bibliotheque Wallonne Leyden (which are now in Centraal Bureau voor Genealo at The Hague), but made no direct claim as to the Rapa ancestry. Dr. George E. McCracken's "Catalyntje Tr Rapalje", in The American Genealogist, Vol. 35 (Octo 1959), pp.193-202, provides an extensive listing of publish accounts. Mr. Slok furnished information from the rep prepared in 1960 by M. P. de Saint-Aubin, Archivist Département du Nord, France.

[4] De Boer's article asserted that Trico belonged to Tricault family but offered no supporting evidence, making the claim unacceptable. Date and circumstances Danckaerts' visit to Catalina are related in Journal of Jas Danckaerts, J. Franklin Jameson, ed. (New York, 19 pp.234-236.

More than anyone else, Megapolensis and his son Samuel (New Netherland's first Harvard graduate who by now was his father's assistant) were responsible for the peaceful surrender of the colony to the British in 1664. They saw any attempt at resistance as useless bloodshed and their point of view finally prevailed. Because of this stand, the domine was severely criticized in the Netherlands and even suspected of treason.

Pragmatism is the basis of this very Dutch religious point of view. With little that is doctrinaire, what is done is what has to be done. The gospel has to be preached to the Mohawks; Jesuit lives must be saved; Jews must be fed and clothed; the religious unity of the community must be maintained; the colony must be peacefully surrendered. This attitude is in sharp contrast with that of Puritan New England, but one which has been a deep influence in the history of American Protestantism generally.

So as to convey some idea of freight rates for the international trade in Newfoundland fish, the price has been calculated for a number of voyages. A Dutch vessel in the trade sailed to Newfoundland in freight to pay for a lading of fish and then proceeded to the Straits of Gibraltar and through the Mediterranean to some port in Spain, France or Italy. There the fish would be sold and another cargo taken on board for the return trip to Amsterdam. These voyages often lasted seven or eight months. The overall freight charge, with its variables, makes unrealistic a rate computed on that basis; fortunately, however, many ships were hired by the month for a minimum of four, but in practice usually eight, months.

In these examples, from documents in the Amsterdam archives, the freight rate per month per ton is given for this trade, together with information about date of freighting, the ships, crews and armament, as follows:

Date	Tonnage	Guns	Crew	Rate
1619 Mar 23	160	8[1]	15	f 5,00
1619 Mar 27	200	8	16	4,75
1624 Apr 17	200	8	15	4,25

Departing from the Texel on July 16, the Pi and her companion vessel, the yacht Mackeral, s for Plymouth, England, whence they sailed on Au 31. Near the Madeira Islands the ships parted com on September 14, the Pigeon continuing toward S America and the Mackeral proceeding to the West In After spending weeks in the Caribbean in search Spanish prize, the Mackeral sailed north and reache Hudson River on December 12, 1623. During the two-year organizational period of West India Company, several trading ventures to Netherland were authorized on condition that the return to Holland before July 1, 1622. One of these ships was the Witte Deijf (White D Before departing from America her captain turned five boats to Jonathan de Necker, skipper for W Smellen who later became a director of Zeeland C ber of the Company. These vessels also win near Albany.[10]

No. 4. — THE RAPALJE-RAPELJE FAMILY, Part II.

by George Olin Zabriskie, Fellow of the American Society of Genealogists.

Writer analyzes records and evaluates sources pertaining to Company's initial efforts to colonize New Netherland.

During the late fall of 1623 the West India Company's supreme executive body, the Assembly of Nineteen, directed the Amsterdam Chamber to "equip" a vessel with trade goods and an advance party of colonists for a voyage to New Netherland. At about the same time, by coincidence, the Reformed Church Consistory in Amsterdam, on November 30, approved the application of Sebastian Janszen Krol to serve in the West Indies as a Comforter of the Sick. Krol was to have sailed on December 7, 1623, but became ill and could not go.

When Krol recovered he was assigned as Comforter of the Sick to the colonists preparing to go to New Netherland. Consistory records indicate that he sailed from Amsterdam on January 25, 1624. That same day the Walloon congregation issued a transfer of membership certificate "to the West Indies" for John Monfort and his wife Catherine (error for Jacqueline) Moreau. As pointed out previously, the Rapaljes, Krol, the Monforts and others departed on the Eendracht with Tienpont as skipper. We do not know when they reached the Hudson River, but it was probably in late March or early April, 1624.[12]

Many years later, in 1685 and again in 1688, Catalina Trico, widow of Joris Janszen Rapalje, made depositions concerning her arrival in America. It should be noted that such a declaration, in law a statement originally upon oath in response to questions and written down in writing for use in court in lieu of the witness' oral testimony, must not be considered an unbiased historical account of the circumstances related. Catalina's first deposition was made to assist William Penn in his dispute with the Calverts over the boundary between Pennsylvania and Maryland, later known as the Mason-Dixon line. The purpose of her second deposition is not apparent.

Catalina stated that she came on the Eendracht, which was Commander Arien Jorise belonging to the West India Company, being the first ship that came from the said Company ... [and] their said commander Arien Jorise stayed with them all winter and went home with the ship...". Furthermore, she stated that Tienpont sent two families and six men to the Connecticut River; two families and eight men to the Delaware River, and left eight men at the mouth of the river "to take possession."

Moreover, Catalina then continued, "The rest of the people went with the ship up to as far as Albany, which was then called Fort Orange. When the ship came as far as Esopus, which is half way to Albany, they left the ship with some boats that were left there by the Dutch that had been there the year before and traded with the Indians upon their own accounts and went back again to Holland, and so brought the vessel home. From this it seems likely the two sloops Tienpont left behind in 1623 were the boats Catalina said were at Esopus.

Notes beginning on Page 12 continue in sequence published in the January issue.

According to her deposition as printed, about 18 families were taken to Fort Orange. In fact, however, at the time the families were removed from Fort Orange to New Amsterdam late in 1626, only eight families and 10 to 12 men were there. So she may have meant "about 18 families and men." However, some of the families may have been withdrawn earlier.

In her first deposition Catalina said four couples were married at sea and that, some three weeks after their arrival, these eight people had been sent to the Delaware. In a statement made at the same time and for the same purpose, another colonist, Pieter Laurenson, said the first Dutch settlement on the Delaware consisted of three or four Walloon families. Thus the number of families sent to that area is uncertain and so, too, the total number aboard the Eendracht.[13]

In August 1624 an unnamed ship returned to Amsterdam with furs and messages from colonists in "that part of Virginia called New Netherland" after she "had conveyed some families from Holland thither." The vessel is said to have been the Mackeral, but that ship could not have sailed from the Albany area when "the grain was nearly as high as a man" (late July or early August) and reached Amsterdam during the latter month. Because the Mackeral indeed had been in New Netherland she has also been credited with taking the advance party as proposed the previous November — another manifest impossibility since, as we have seen, that ship departed from Holland on July 16, 1623.

The new arrival, in fact, was Eendracht under the command, according to Catalina Trico, of Adrian Tienpont's son; and on board for a short visit home was Sebastian Janszen Krol. Some years later, on June 30, 1634, Krol in a deposition about his first trip to New Netherland said he had "made a voyage and stay of 7½ months in that country," a slight exaggeration of his actual sojourn.

But soon after coming home Krol told the Amsterdam Consistory, on November 14, 1624, "that there are pregnant women there [among the colonists in America]." He did not say, as some writers have suggested, that children already had been born in New Netherland. Krol asked for authority to perform baptisms and marriages. A week later, on November 21, he received permission "to administer christian baptism and marriage sacraments in 'the Virginias.'" He sailed again for New Netherland in December 1624, or January 1625, on the Orangenboom.[14]

Having considered the advance party of Walloon colonists, we turn now to the main body. On March 28, 1624, the Assembly of Nineteen approved the "articles and instructions" as drawn up for the guidance of "the colonists who go to New Netherland for the chamber of Amsterdam [and who] will be enrolled tomorrow." After a day's delay the colonists took an oath of acceptance and allegiance before two Amsterdam magistrates on March 30. That day or soon afterward they sailed for America on the Nieu Nederlandt, Cornelis Jacobszen May, skipper. On board as a "passenger in the service of the Company" was Willem van der Hulst (or Verhulst), who would succeed May as Director of New Netherland in 1625.

Other passengers almost certainly included the following, who with their destinations are listed and dated among the Amsterdam Walloon Church dismissals: (1) Philippe du Trieux, on March 11, 1624 "to the West Indies"; (2) Antone Harduin, on March 13, "to Virginia"; (3) Arnould Rhemi and wife Marie Bauldwyn, and Antonie Rhemi, on March 27, "to Virginia." Two years later, in 1626, "Aernou Renny" became plaintiff in a suit against Verhulst in New Netherland.[15]

When dismissed by the Company after a year in office as resident Director of New Ntherland, Verhulst returned to Amsterdam in 1626. On July 30, 1627, in Amsterdam, he made a deposition designed to help Hendrik Eelkens and partners establish a claim against the West India Company for the five boats which Eelkens' ship Witte Deijf had left in New Netherland late in 1623. Verhulst declared that the Nieu Nederlandt sailed up the Hudson to near Albany — > where they found a yacht anchored, called the Falling Nut Tree, and that the principal commanders and officers of the ship called New Netherland took into their possession the said yacht and lodged therein the families which were in their ship, as they also made use of the said yacht, until they had an opportunity to land and build dwelling places in which they afterward lodged the said families.

In Trico's deposition the sequence was, "made a small fort" and then "built themselves some huts of bark . . .". Verhulst had no reason for mentioning the Eendracht families, but it is likely that they too were temporarily lodged on the anchored yacht. Verhulst, continuing—

> Declares further, at the time they arrived at the yacht, on this yacht was already the commandery of Jan Jansz. Brouwer who with certain people were also lodged therein, in the service of the West India Company. Declares further that they found at the same time a yacht called the Red Dove with sails and tackle; that they used this yacht too in the service of the West India Company, sailing it along the coast to the north and to the south, and have been trading with it in the service of the same Company; that they also found there a biscay-sloop which they also used in the service of the same Company.[16]

The only account of New Netherland's first colonists that approaches contemporary reportage is that of Nicolaes Wassenaer, an Amsterdam physician who from 1622 to 1631 kept his countrymen up to date on current events by compendiums issued every six months at a time before newspapers existed. He was seldom an eye-witness to the occurrences described but depended almost entirely on word of mouth information. Although an indefatigable reporter and as a rule factually well grounded, Wassenaer in his synoptic method, or perhaps reliance on less than fully informed sources, sometimes omitted details of interest to latter-day researchers.

Thus, Wassenaer in his narrative does not mention the five boats left by the Witte Deijf in New Netherland during 1623, or the important roles they played on arrival of Nieu Nederlandt in the Albany area. Nor does he refer to the advance party of colonists aboard Eendracht and their employment of these boats along with some people and trade goods under the direction of Skipper Adrian Joriszen Tienpont of Eendracht. Omitted, too, is the fact that Verhulst was on Nieu Nederlandt. Plainly, Wassenaer's account is far from complete. He states that the West India Company — > equipped in the spring a vessel of 130 lasts ca

> the Nieu Nederlandt, whereof Cornelis Jacobsz > of Hoorn was skipper, with a company of 30 f

> to the Fatherland . . .

Not only is the foregoing report incomplete; i partially incorrect. According to Wassenaer the Nederlandt sailed "the beginning of March"; but was still in Amsterdam on the last day of March. Orange was not built on Castle Island but on the bank of the Hudson, in present downtown Alba "Fort Wilhelmus" on "Prince's Island" has baffled m writers, most of whom have tried to place it downr from Albany. Wassenaer failed to tell his readers h he had moved his locale from the Hudson to the D aware River, where the fort was built on present H lington Island. Note his sequence: they built F Orange, planted crops, then the Mackeral sailed; wh upon they "placed" Fort Wilhelmus, and "on lea there" sailed toward Bermuda, and the west wind longer a strange phenomenon, wafted them home.

Wassenaer wrote his account under a sub-title da April 1624, and used 1624 in the margin. These w changed to 1623 in O'Callaghan's published ver thus further garbling the story. The original account has nevertheless been called "trustworthy" and "contemporary" (ergo accurate), and the information given in the Trico depositions was until very recent times rejected as the babblings of a senile old lady. It seems apparent, however, that it is Trico who has a better claim to trustworthiness than Wassenaer as interpreted and embellished by O'Callaghan and his followers. In point of fact, the details she recalled after more than sixty years, and when over eighty years of age, are remarkably accurate.[18]

When one considers the size of Nieu Nederlandt, 130 "lasts" (260 tons), in relation to the about 30 colonizing families, their belongings, tools and other equipment, plus the soldiers and crew, it seems not unlikely that this count included the people on Eendracht.

Of the known colonists, only the Rapaljes can be said with certainty to have remained continuously in New Netherland. The Monforts went back to Holland, but returned to New Netherland in 1639 with their son Peter and his family. The du Trieux family would stay in America, but in 1624 Philippe's wife had not been dismissed from the Amsterdam Walloon Church, so he may have returned to Holland for her and their children. The Vigne family (name also spelled Vinje and Vinge) apparently came to New Netherland on one of the two 1624 ships, despite many assertions to the contrary. Rachel, the third daughter of Guilliam Vigne and Ariantje Cuvilje, was baptized March 16, 1623 (New Style) in the Walloon Church at Leyden. The Vigne family is generally believed to have stayed.[19]

Reproduction of leaflet title-page describing illness in 1622-23 at Woerden orphanage of Evert Willemsz. Bogaert, who later became Domine Everardus Bogardus of New Amsterdam.

As a pictorial sequel to the article Dutch Ancestry of Domine Everardus Bogardus, concluded in the last issue, this early 17th century print graphically introduces the story of young Evert's devastating afflictions. His complete recovery, which excited wide interest, decisively turned him toward the ministry.

The circumstances surrounding this episode and publication of the leaflet were related in the article by P. H. Bogaard of De Meern, Utrecht, the Netherlands, who kindly furnished a photocopy of the title-page. The English translation, of which Mr. Bogaard spoke highly, is by Charles A. Van Patten:

True and Accurate History / Which is recorded in the city of Woerden / How God Almighty has shown His wonders to a certain orphan child named Evert Willemsz. whom He has visited with deafness and dumbness / And how wondrous things have befallen him / Which to him / So he writes / Were revealed by the Angel of God / In witness of the truth whereof the Rector of Woerden / As being his master affirmed and established / And subscribed with his own hand.

This took place the 18th and 19th of January / New Style / It is said that he bespoke wondrous things again.

No. 4 — THE RAPALJE-RAPELJE FAMILY, Part III.

by George Olin Zabriskie, Fellow of the American Society of Genealogists.

Joris Rapalje, and wife, Catalina Trico, raised large family as he prospered in business, became active in public life.

Like some genealogical studies of other Dutch families in America, early accounts written about Joris Rapalje, his wife Catalina Jeronimus Trico and their offspring tend to show more solicitude for tradition than ascertainable fact. Not infrequently the writers differ over such basic data as when and where the Rapaljes lived, and when and where their children were born. Let us consider these matters with a view to clarifying the sequence of events and establishing a factual record.

First it should be noted that the Rapaljes lived initially at Fort Orange, and not on Long Island or Staten Island as has been variously asserted. Joris, a textile worker in Holland until he and Catalina emigrated as youthful newlyweds in 1624, adapted himself to the arduous toil of the pioneer, although we do not know exactly what he did. Without farming experience, he could have helped clear the land and plant crops during the three growing seasons (Catalina called them "yeȝrs") the family lived at Fort Orange. Perhaps he served as a lookout guard while others cleared and planted, or aided the fur traders in dealing with the Indians or in processing furs. In any event Joris profited from the experience, for in later years he would own and operate farm property in the Wallabout section of Brooklyn.

Soon after the harvest in 1626 the Rapaljes' sojourn at Fort Orange terminated when the Company re-settled eight families there in Manhattan. With their removal from the area, Fort Orange ceased to be a settlement and reverted to its former status of fortified trading post; and so it remained for several years. In 1630 a small number of Rensselaerswyck colonists arrived, some with families. Another group came in 1631; and others followed. For these people the fort provided protection and a source of supply. Long afterward, in 1652, the village of Beverwyck was established encompassing Fort Orange within its boundaries.

The re-location of families downriver was pursuant to Company decision to establish a center of operations in New Netherland on Manhattan. Selection of this site over the initially favored Burlington Island in the North River made it necessary to build up the site, and New Amsterdam, and for this purpose Company-sponsored colonists were brought together on the southern end of Manhattan. Here a fort, building lots, farms, and road system had been laid out and construction started. More land was to be cleared, and houses and barns built. But settlers from Patria were few and progress slow. Even after 1629, when land was offered to prospective patroons and free settlers alike, the settlement grew slowly.[20]

For some time after arriving in New Amsterdam the Rapaljes probably lived in a rough shelter near the East River. Again, we do not know the nature of Joris' duties; perhaps he was a farmhand at the outset, helping to clear and cultivate the land, or caring for the farm animals sent over from Holland in 1625. Eventually, as Joris moved up in the world, the couple acquired a building lot just south of the Fort, and there they built two houses on the north side of Pearl Street, at Nos. 17 and 19, west of Het Marckvelt (present Whitehall Street); their daughter Sarah lived next door at about No. 15. The records of New Amsterdam and New Netherland show that Joris embarked upon a many-faceted career in which, besides gaining prominence in public affairs, he became a plantation owner, part-owner of a privateer, trader and tavernkeeper.

In 1637 Joris bought from the Indians land at the Wallabout (Dutch for "an inner bay") in present Brooklyn — the first acreage to be purchased in that part of Long Island, adjacent to the East River. The 1639 Manatus Map shows two "plantages" there, both his (the word signified something less than a fully equipped farm). While Joris, with several others, may have farmed the Wallabout property at that time, the Rapaljes did not move there permanently until after 1650. Their daughter Sarah was born at Fort Orange; all the other children were born on Manhattan. The family probably moved after selling their Pearl Street home in 1654. Catalina retained ownership of the smaller house on this lot until she sold it in 1674.[21]

Day-to-day actions of the Rapaljes and other colonists were greatly influenced by the ever-present Indians, a volatile and powerful element, generally well disposed but dangerous when provoked. As Catalina said in her deposition in 1688, the Indians near Fort Orange "came and made Covenants of friendship with ye said Arien Jorrise, the Commander, Bringing him great Presents . . . that they might come & have Constant free trade with them . . . ye said Deponent lived in Albany three years, all which time ye sd Indians were all quiet as lambs, & came & traded with all ye freedom imaginable . . .".

This statement was true except for one isolated incident. When the ship Mackeral sailed from New Netherland in 1624 the supercargo, Daniel Krieckenbeeck, remained at Fort Orange and in 1626 was in command. In July of that year he and some men rashly joined a Mohegan war party against the Mohawks, and in the ensuing fight he and three of his men were killed. According to Wassenaer, one of them "they [the Mohawks] devoured after having well roasted him; the rest they burnt."

Despite its potential for creating permanent hostility between the Dutch and Mohawk Indians, this episode caused only momentary friction. Some writers have stated that the incident brought about the removal of colonists from Fort Orange to New Amsterdam, but this was not the case. Protected by the fort, the Dutch families stood in no great danger of attack; but they were needed to construct the fort and other buildings at New Amsterdam, and to add more manpower to control the warlike Manhattes Indians.[22]

A good deal has been written about the Company's several Directors General in New Netherland, much of it derogatory, often justifiably so. Willem Kieft, by far the least competent of these officials, was commissioned in September 1637 and took office March 28, 1638. His Indian policy, as outlined in a resolution he induced his Council to pass on September 15, 1639, was "To exact tribute from the Indians in maize, furs or wampum, and in the case of unwillingness to employ proper means to remove their reluctance."

Naturally, friction developed and relations worsened until in February 1643, upon Kieft's orders, Dutch soldiers and burghers massacred two unsuspecting groups of Indians — men, women and children — in their encampments, one at Pavonia on the Jersey shore of the Hudson and the other on Manhattan. In retaliation the vengeful Indians, besides destroying an immense amount of property, killed, captured or drove into New Amsterdam virtually every settler in the lower Hudson Valley. It was probably during this period of conflict, which brought New Netherland to the brink of ruin, that the Rapaljes' son Jacob was "slain by the heathens."

Some time before, in 1641 while Kieft was demanding taxes from the natives, a colonist on Manhattan was murdered by an Indian from Westchester. The culprit was identified but Kieft could not induce the tribesmen to deliver him up. Angered, the Director asked the commonalty to elect a board of twelve men to advise him on what to do and on Indian problems in general. But when duly elected, the Twelve Men recommended various reforms, whereupon Kieft dismissed the board; but not before three members concurred, or so he claimed, in taking extreme measures against the Indians. Joris was one of the Twelve but, to his credit, not one of the three named by Kieft.

After the family removed to the Wallabout more Indian troubles developed. In September 1655, when Stuyvesant and most of his armed forces were on the Delaware subduing the Swedes, Indians swarmed into New Amsterdam to avenge the slaying of a squaw for stealing peaches. After hours of harassing the inhabitants, wounding the burgher who shot the woman, and killing several of the watch, the warriors crossed over to the Jersey shore and captured or slew most of the Dutch settlers found there. The next day they moved on to Staten Island and continued to pillage and kill. Again, nearly all Dutch families in the lower Hudson Valley had to abandon temporarily their farms and settlements, and flee to New Amsterdam for protection; and again the colony sustained heavy losses in property.[23]

The selection of Joris Rapalje as one of the Twelve Men showed his standing among the colonists. After the family removed to the Wallabout he served as schepen on the Brooklyn court from 1655-57 and in 1660. Records of the Brooklyn Reformed Church show that he witnessed the baptism of a grandson on April 30, 1662; and in the membership records we find, under date of December 25, 1662, Jorise Janssen Rappalje, Catharina Jeronymos and Catharina Joris Rapalje listed as joining the church from "the Manhattans." Joris died February 21, 1662, according to John A. Bogart in The Bogart Family (Scranton, Pa., 1959, p.64), and most likely was buried on his farm at the Wallabout.

Catalina Jeronimus Trico was a remarkable person. She did not read or write; at least we must assume so, since she signed her marriage intention and a deposition by mark. Starting out as an 18-year-old French-speaking Walloon bride on a Dutch ship bound for a little known land, she observed and retained for over sixty years many unusual details of the voyage to America.

In her old age she correctly recalled, for example, that the two boats at Esopus belonged to Dutchmen who the year before had "been a tradeing with ye dians upon there own accounts . . .". Also, that men were left at the mouth of the Hudson "to Possession . . .". We can verify many of the ma pects of her testimony, such as the name of the she came on, the skipper's name and the fact tha stayed for the first winter, and sent his son bac Holland in command of the ship. We have no w cross-check some statements, such as the numbe families and men sent to various locations; but we she was very nearly right in her count, and fully rect regarding the areas to which the people were patched.

Catalina helped her husband with his business a until his death, and outlived him by many year 1680 she was visited by the Labadists, who said then had 145 living descendants, with an increa 150 anticipated. Dr. George E. McCracken, in October 1959 issue of The American Genealogist, vides a list of 150 descendants and in-laws. And can believe a passage in Governor Thomas Don official report of September 22, 1686/7, this nu more than doubled in about seven years. Dongan port, which concerned the province's fortifications tains this digression: ". . . the people growing every more numerous & they generaly [sic] of a turb disposition. In this Country there is a woman yet [certainly Catalina] from whose Loyns there are wards of three hundred and sixty persons now li The men that are here have generally lusty st bodies."[24]

After the publication of Part I of this article, Hugh T. Law, of the French and Mediterranean G alogical Research Association, 1216 Lillie Circle, Lake City, Utah 84121, furnished data about the entage of Joris Janszen Rapalje which augments previously given. RAPALJE-RAPELJE FAMILY

Jean Rapareillet were siblings, and that their unnamed mother was "la femme Rapareille, molnier [miller]," who was buried February 23, 1606, at Valenciennes. All the baptismal and burial entries here given are from registers of St. Nicolaes Roman Catholic Church of that city, in the Département du Nord in France:

1. Olivier, son of Jean, baptized February 28, 1594.
2. Anne, daughter of Jean, baptized September 17, 1595.
3. Francois, son of Jean, baptized November 5, 1596.
4. Nicolaes, son of Jean, baptized July 10, 1598.
5. child, of undetermined sex, buried November 16, 1600, without baptism.
6. Georges [Joris Janszen, in Dutch], "illegitimate" son of Jean, baptized April 28, 1604.

Two older Rapareille children, also baptized in St. Nicolaes' Church, may have been sisters or half-sisters of Joris, namely: (1) Jejenne, daughter of Jean, bapt. August 1, 1578; and (2) Marie, daughter of Jean, bapt. July 28, 1580.[25]

Birth dates of the eleven children of Joris and Catalina have been taken from the Geslagt [Geslacht] Register (Genealogical Register), which gives the names and dates of birth van de kinderen of Joris Janse Rappelje; Catalina is not mentioned. This document comprises two handwritten pages, the first of which — measuring 7⅞ by 12½ inches in size — is a copy of an earlier record, having been written at one sitting by one person.

From various indications, such as incorrect spelling of some Dutch words, and gratuitous use of "De Rappelje" for Daniel (after the others had been listed without surnames), it seems that this copy was made in the early 18th century. The second sheet, 7¼ by 12 inches in size, contains similar handwriting and may have been penned at the same time as the first, although the writing is much more crowded. This page provides names of the spouses of Joris' children; names and birthdates of the children of his son Jeronimus, and the names of their spouses. We are indebted to Mr. Robert G. Goelet, a Trustee of the Holland Society and President of the New-York Historical Society, and to Mr. James Gregory, Librarian of the latter, for xerox copies of this document.

There has been controversy over the birthdate of Sarah, the eldest child. The Genealogical Register entry plainly reads "9th" (of June, 1625). But a descendant of hers, a Gysbert Bogart, reportedly said that his great-grandmother Sarah was born on the 7th, not the 9th. We prefer the written evidence over word-of-mouth tradition. Sarah's birthplace was Fort Orange, whereas the ten other children were born at New Amsterdam, the last five being baptized in the Dutch Reformed Church. Many families had children who died young; perhaps the Rapaljes had one or more who were born and died between 1629 and 1635, and whose identities were unknown to the compiler of the Register.

The eleven known children of Joris Janszen Rapalje and his wife Catalina Jeronimus Trico were:

1. Sara Joris Rapalje: born June 9, 1625, "De eerste Dochter Van Joris Janse Rappelje, Genaamt, Sara." She married, first, Hans Hansen Bergen, and second, Teunis Gysbertszen Bogaert.

[25] Particulars received from Mr. Law with his letter dated January 1, 1972.

2. Marritje Joris Rapalje: born March 11, 1627, "De Twede Dochter, Genaamt, Marretie." She married Michiel Pauluszen Van der Voort.
3. Jannetje Joris Rapalje: born August 18, 1629, "De Derde Dochter, Genaamt, Jannetie." She married Rem Janszen Van der Beeck.
4. Judith Joris Rapalje: born July 5, 1635, "De 4 Dochter, Genaamt, Judick." She married Pieter Pieterszen Van Ness.
5. Jan Joriszen Rapalje: born August 28, 1637, "Den Eersten soon, Genaamt, Jan." He married Maria Fredericks Maer.
6. Jacob Joriszen Rapalje: born May 28, 1639, "De Twede soon, Genaamt, Jacob." He was "killed by the heathens," probably in 1643.
7. Cathalyntje Joris Rapalje: born March 28, and baptized March 29, 1641. "De Fifde Dochter, Genaamt, Cateleyntie." She married Jeremiah Janszen Westerhout.
8. Jeronimus Joriszen Rapalje: born June 27, and baptized June 28, 1643, "De Derde Soon, Genaamt, Jeronemus." He married Annetje Teunis Denys.
9. Annetje Joris Rapalje: born February 8, and baptized February 11, 1646, "De Sesde Dochter, Genaamt, Annetie." She married Marten Reyerszen.
10. Elisabeth Joris Rapalje: born March 28, and baptized March 29, 1648. "De Sevende Dochter, Genaamt, Elisabett." She married Dirck Corneliszen Hogeland.
11. Daniel Joriszen Rapalje: born December 29, 1650 and baptized January 1, 1651. "De Vierde soon, Genaamt, Daniel De Rappelje." He married Sarah Abrahams Clock.[26]

As previously noted, there were pregnant women in New Netherland when Krol left to return to Holland in mid-1624. Since Sarah Rapalje was born on June 9, 1625, Catalina Trico was not one of them. And probably Ariantje Cuvilje (Vigne) had not yet conceived Jan Vigne since her daughter Rachel was only about fifteen months old at the time Krol departed. Hence it is improbable that Jan and Sarah were the first "christian" male and female children born in New Netherland. Those honors must go to the two or more infants born of undetermined parentage in the last half of 1624 and the early part of 1625, to parents, that is, who joined most of the other early colonists in returning to Europe after their contract term expired, or who were released early.

In April 1656, Sarah Rapalje referred to herself as "Sara Joresey, first born christian daughter of New Netherland." Her statement would be true if all children born before her were males, or if it meant she was the first of the living native-born female New Netherlanders. Jan Vigne and Sarah Rapalje apparently were the first "christian" male and female who were lived, and died in New Netherland.[27]

It would be manifestly unfair to the three p families — Rapalje, Vigne and du Trieux, who on after offspring were born — to rank them sequence necessarily arrived at by conjecture; eac one of the three Founding Families of New Nethe With this we complete our account of the Ra the du Trieux and Vignes are to be discussed la the present series. Bogaard's admirable thre study entitled "The Dutch Ancestry of Domine ardus Bogardus" (concluded in de Halve Mae January) — will concern the celebrated Anneke wife of Domine Bogardus and previously the w Roelof Janszen, and her children by both husba

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

ently one of the most odious offenses, elicited the elaborate executions. The supreme court ordere Creoli, a black, to be choked to death, then burn ashes, for that crime in 1646. In 1660, the cou rected that a soldier be tied in a sack and drown the river for the same offense.[13]

In 1625, in the early days of New Netherlan Company intended that at least some offenders turned to Europe for sentencing and punish Whether any criminals were actually punished i clumsy and time-consuming way is unknown. the most severe punishments were being carried New Netherland in the 1630s. Still, there rem some question in 1648 as to whether offenders s be shipped to Holland. In that year, Director Stuyvesant sent a felon to the Netherlands an reprimanded for his act. Presumably any capital pu ments which were effected, however, were carrie in New Netherland.[14]

Capital punishment in New Netherland, then, rare occurrence. How is this to be explained in of the very frequent executions in the Nether over two hundred in the last quarter of the sevent century in the city of Amsterdam alone? The lead the Company and the province no doubt felt tha frequent executions of Europe would be detrimen a tiny community in the wilderness, short of labo threatened by Indians and other European colo Instead, severe corporal punishments were general flicted, calculated to inspire awe of authority a keep order in the province, yet to permit the cri to return to his labors as soon as possible.[15]

Washington Irving was far from the truth wh portrayed New Netherland as free from crime punishments. He was virtually correct, however, he described the province as being innocent of han and other executioners.

"The Raparlier family is descended from that of de Rapalje, which as early as the eleventh century possessed large estates in Bretagne, and ranked among the "arrie're-ban" of the French nobility. Some of its members were distinguished as military leaders in the crusades, others were celebrated for political eminence and professional talent. But in the religious wars of the sixteenth century, being known as Protestants, they became the victims of Papal animosity and were scattered and expelled from France. The family subsequently gained prominence in Switzerland and Belgium, where they acquired large possessions and continue to the present time.

Joris Jansen de Rapalje, one of the proscribed Huguenot race, from La Rochelle in France, was the common ancestor of all the American families of the name. He came to this country with the Colonists in 1623, in the Unity, a ship of the West India Company, and settled at Fort Orange, now Albany, New York, where he continued for three years.

George de Raparlier and his bride, Cataline Tricaud, or Joris Jansen Rapalje and Catalyne Trico, as their names were spelled phonetically by the Dutch people, came from Leyden in Holland, where he was born. The patronymic "Jansen" indicated that George was 'fils de Jean de Raparlier'. His father, Jean Raparlier, a weaver, had settled there from one of the Belgian refugee colonies in the southern part of England, either from London, Canterbury, Sandwich or Southampton, where he was born. Jean Raparlier's parents and his grandfather, Jean de la Raparlier, had fled to England after the Spanish capture and destruction of their ancestral city of Valenciennes in 1567, and they had landed in Southampton in September of that year. Valenciennes then a city in the French-speaking part of the Netherlands, was the first city which heroically opposed the tyranny of Philip, Lord of the Netherlands, and hereditary King of Spain. Those reverent martyrs, the well known formulators of the Reformed Confession of the Faith, known as "The Galic Confession", Peregrine de la Grange and Guido de Bray, preachers at Valenciennes, friends and probably relatives of the Raparlier family, had found their death and heavenly crown in 1567.

From family letters, in the possession of the New York Historical Society, based upon the statement of her great-grandson, Gysbert Bogert, we know that Sarah Raparlier, daughter of George Raparlier and Cataline Tricaud, his wife, was born at Fort Orange (later Albany), on June 7, 1624, and not on the 9th of June as some have said. She was the first white girl born in New Netherland.

1. COLET de RAPALJE

Colet de Rapalje, born ca 1550, of Sur Loire, France was the father of Jean Rapalje, and the Grandfather of Joris Jansen Rapalje. He was an officer in the Army of Henry of Navarre and was a nephew of the famous Admiral Coligny. His wife's name was -- Janssen, a daughter of Abram Janssen, a noted artist.

Children:

2. Brecktje, married ca 1569 Janssen Jan Abram.

*3. JEAN, born ca 1572.

4. Willem,

5. Antonie,

3. JEAN RAPALJE - wife unknown

Children:

6. Joris Jansen Rapalje

(Probably others?)

6. JORIS JANSEN RAPALJE

Joris Jansen Rapalje was a Huguenot who came from Leyden, Holland, and settled in Fort Orange, Albany. Joris was a grandson of Colet Rapalje, an officer in the Army of Henry of Navarre, King Louis XIV. In 1655 and several times thereafter, was one of the magistrates of Brooklyn. Joris was a leader among the persecuted Walloons of the Reformed Faith who fled to this country and established the hamlet at the Wallabout, on the Long Island shore of the East River, which now gives the name of Wallabout to that portion of the modern city of Brooklyn, New York. The name of Rapalje occurs with great frequency in the early annals of the New Netherlands and of the Province after the English occupation, often in positions of trust and public importance.

In the town of Bushwick, the first settlers in the territory of the later town of Bushwick seems to have been mostly Scandinavian was included Hans Hansen. His land extended from the Kil of Joris Rapalje through a part of the towns of Brooklyn and Bushwick to the Newtown Creek.

South of the Hans Hansen's plantation the land was granted in 1661 to the villagers for common woodland, and was known as the Boswijck Nieuw Loten, or the New Lotts of Bushwick.

Across the Brooklyn line Joris Jansen Rapalje's plantation, called by the Indians, "Rinnegacouck", extended from Wallabout Bay (originally Walboght) south to Nostrand and De Kalb Avenues. He had purchased the land from the Indians in 1637 and received a patent for it in 1643.

In 1830 Wallabout Village was started, including within its limits the Cripplebush Settlement, later this section was known as East Brooklyn. The old Rappalyea House on the Cripplebush Road, Wallabout, was built by the great-grandfather of Jeremiah J. Rappalyea who was born there in 1813. When the old house had to be torn down, Jeremiah moved to the house he had built upon the upper part of his farm.

Hans H. Bergen and Joris Rapalje are listed in the New York Knickerbacker Families, as was Francis Goelet, whose son Jacob married Jannetje Cossart, daughter of Jacques Cossart."

Joris Jansen Rapalje was born ca 1604 at Leyden. He died in Brooklyn, New York February 21, 1663. He married at Amsterdam, Holland in the Walloon Church there to Catalyntje Trico, daughter of Jeronomis and --?-- Trico (wife's name unknown) who arrived in America from Paris, Valenciennes, France ca 1620. Catalyntje (Trico) Rapalje died September 11, 1689 at Long Island, New York.

10. JUDITH RAPALJE - see Van Nest (1)

Catalyntje Trico, wife of Joris Jansen Rapalie, is said to have been of the Tricault family, which was located chiefly in the neighborhood of Valenciennes, France. Immediate ancestors of the family are also credited with having been weavers, the family name being permanently preserved in that of a certain woven fabric of which they were the inventors. (Tricot weave, a soft kind of ribbed cloth, used as dress material; or a woolen yarn fabric knitted by hand).

Catalyntje's father is said by some writers to have been Joris Trico. Another states that she was the daughter of Jan Trico, a physician of Paris, France. Also, that her father was Jeronomis Trico and her mother's name said to have been Mary ? This family arrived in America from Valenciennes, France in 1620. I found no record of any children other than Catalyntje.

In October, 1688 Cately"n Trico, age about 83, made a desposition, at her house on Long Island, in ye Wall Bought, before William Morris, Justice of the peace, concerning her trip in 1623 aboard a ship she called ye "Unity" when she came to this country, to the best of her rememberance. She also made a desposition aged fouer score years or thereabouts in New Yorke February 14, 1685/5 before The Dongan. That fouer women came along with her in the same Shipp and were married at sea.

The 1688 desposition - When ye Ship came as farr as Albany, which they then called Fort Orange, ye Ship came as farr as Sopus which is 1/2 way to Albanie, they were left there by ye Dutch. She lived in Albany three years, all which time ye said Indians were all as quiet as Lambs and came and traded with all ye freedom Imagineable; in ye year 1626 she came from Albany and settled at New Yorke where she lived for many years and then came to Long Island where she now lives.

The following report contradicts her statement, because of her age, that she must have come over on the "New Netherland" as the ship "Unity" does not appear on the records until shortly after 1631. That the "New Netherland", was convoyed in 1624, by either "de Hoope" or "de Eendracht," both contemporary Dutch warships.

Conclusion: That the ship "Mackerel" sailed July 16, 1623, from Texel with the advance guard of the Colonists, and that the "Mackerel" took possession December 12, 1623.

(from The Trico Affidavits)

It is established from Catalyntje's deposition of 1688, that in 1626 the family, (then three in number) moved to New York and after several years moved to Long Island. In the summer of 1626 there were 270 white inhabitants living at the lower end of the island. Here Rapalie opened the first public inn.

Little else in the way of documentary records has been found. In 1642 she asked of Paulus Van der Beeck why he had struck her daughter. Upon his denying the accusation, she replied "you lie like a villain and a dog". He struck her in the presence of witnessess and called her vile names. For this she sued him for slander, January 5, 1645. On January 12, he declared he could not prove his assertions and that he "knows nothing of the plaintiff but what is virtuous and good and as he struck her he will pay the fine of 2 1/2 guilders."

Catalyntje and her daughter Sarah made a declaration August 31, 1642, regarding the conduct Tryn Jonas, midwife, when sent for to attend Catalyntje.

On July 30, 1671, Catalyntje, then a widow, was granted a patent for a lot in New York.

Catalynje died September 11, 1689, according to the ancient family record. (Memoirs of the L.I. Historical Society, Vol. I, p. 342). She signed her name with a backhand "K".

Catalyntje and Joris were parents of 11 children, of whom seven were daughters and four were sons. Their births cover a period from 1625 to 1650. All baptisms were in the New Amsterdam been stationed at the cities of New York and Philadelphia. In 1776, while officiating at a Quarterly Meeting, he was told that he was to be seized by a party of militia, and was advised to depart; but he decided to remain; and on reaching the place where he was to preach, he saw officers and soldiers mingled with the congregation. He was not, however, molested. He returned to England prior to June, 1778, and died at or near London in 1810.

Dutch Church.

The records of births of their children are contained in the family register, now preserved in the Library of the New York Historical Society, New York City. Titled "Denamen & Geslagt Register van der Kinderen van Joris Janse Rappelje."

RANKIN, JAMES. Of York County, Pennsylvania. In 1776 he confessed, in writing, that he had publicly misrepresented and personally insulted the Whig Committee of York County; asked forgiveness; and promised, "on the faith and honor of an honest man, to respect the Continental Congress, and behave as a good citizen." Attainted, and property confiscated. In 1781 he was Chairman of the Board of Refugees, at New York. In 1793 a small part of his estate was restored to a son and daughter; but, as late as 1852, his heirs claimed of the Legislature of Pennsylvania the sum of $30,000, in restitution for the part retained by the State. A bill was introduced, discussed, and postponed.

RAPALJE, JOHN. Of New York. In 1774 he was a member of the Committee of Correspondence, and in 1775 he had a seat in the House of Assembly, and was one of the fourteen who, during the recess that year, addressed General Gage, at Boston, on the subject of the unhappy contest. His property was confiscated, and he departed the country. During the war, he was in authority at Brooklyn, and it is supposed that he carried off the public records of that town, as they were never seen after his removal. His estate was large, and consisted principally of land. He died in England, in 1802, in his seventy-fourth year.

RAPELJE, GEORGE. Of New York. Captain in the Loyal Militia. In 1776 he was at the head of a party of light-horse, in Newtown, who brandished their naked swords, and declared that they "were in pursuit of that damned rebel, Doctor Riker," to the great terror of the women. The object of their wrath had escaped in a boat. He subsequently served as Commissary of Fuel, and under his direction large quantities of wood were cut for the use of the Royal troops. At the peace, accompanied by his family of five, and seven servants, he went from New York to Shelburne, Nova Scotia, where the Crown granted him fifty acres of land, one town, and one water lot. A person of this name was in Florida soon after the Revolution.

Rapelje, Captain Jeromus. Of Newtown, New York. In 1776, among the proscribed; he died that year, while the Whigs were in search of him. It is said that his family, apprehensive of violence to his remains, buried him in great haste.

Rapelje, Rem. Of New York. "We had some grand toory rides in this city this week," wrote Peter Elting, June 15, 1776. Yesterday "several of them ware hondled verry roughly, being caried trugh the streets on rails, there cloaths tore from there becks, and there bodies pritty well mingled with the dust." Rapelje was one of the victims. "There is hardly a toory face to be seen this morning," said Elting, in exclamation. In October, of the same year, Rapelje was an addresser of Lord and Sir William Howe.

Ratheu, Joseph. Of North Carolina. Went to England previous to July, 1779.

Raymond, Stent. Of Connecticut. A grantee of St. John, New Brunswick, in 1783. Sarah, his widow, died at Hampton, in that Province, in 1847, aged eighty-six.

Raymond, Silas. Of Norwalk, Connecticut. With his wife and four children, and widow Mary, of the same place, arrived at St. John, New Brunswick, in the ship Union, in the spring of 1783. Silas settled in King's County, and died there in 1824, aged seventy-six.

Raymond, White. Of Norwalk, Connecticut. Went to New Brunswick at the peace. Deceased in 1835, at the age of seventy-six, and was buried at Hampton.

were followed by their brother Daniel in 1727. They all settled in Berks County. There was also a sister Anna Elizabeth.

The Zeller (Zelaire) family came from Strasbourg to London in 1708–09. Clothilde de Valois Zeller came to America with her two sons settling at Livingstone Manor, New York, then Schoharie and later in Pennsylvania, at Newmanstown, and Womelsdorf in 1723.

The Depew family is of noble origin. Barthelmy Dupuy was born in 1650 and became a trusted lieutenant in the guard of Louis XIV. In 1682 he retired and married Countess Susannah Lavillon. In 1685 he escaped to Germany where he stayed fourteen years, then went to England in 1699 and from there to Virginia where he died in 1714. Chauncy Depew is a descendant.

Daniel Perrin came over in 1665 from the Island of Jersey, located at Elizabethtown Plantations and in 1666 married Maria Thorel a fellow passenger on the "Phillip". They settled on Staten Island where he died in 1719. The family is supposed to have fled first to England, or Ireland in the early sixteenth century.

Names of other families are: Boyer, Rettean (Rettie), Gobin (Goble), Markle (Merkle), DeLong, Girardin (Sheridin), Gerber, Moser, Beaver (Biever, Beeber), Hoch (High), DuCosson, Jourdan (Jordan), LaBar, LaVall, LaMar, Jessup, LeRoy (Konig, King), Dutay (Douty, Doute), Lacrone, Fleury, Coryell, Dusseaux, Espy, Laroux, Leconte.

The Raparlier family is descended from that of de Rapalje, which as early as the eleventh century possessed large estates in Bretagne, and ranked among the arrière-ban of the French nobility. Some of its members were distinguished as military leaders in the crusades, others were celebrated for political eminence and professional talent. But in the religious wars of the sixteenth century, being known as Protestants, they became the victims of Papal animosity and were scattered and expelled from France. The family subsequently gained prominence in Switzerland and Belgium, where they acquired large possessions and continue to the present time.

Joris Jansen de Rapalje, one of the proscribed Huguenot race, from La Rochelle in France, was the common ancestor of all the American families of the name. He came to this country with the Colonists in 1623, in the Unity, a ship of the West India Company, and settled at Fort Orange, now Albany, where he continued for three years.

George de Raparlier and his bride, Cataline Tricaud, or Joris Jansen Rapalje and Catalyne Trico, as their names were spelled phonetically by the Dutch people, came from Leyden in Holland, where he was born. The patronymic 'Jansen' indicated that George was 'fils de Jean de Raparlier'. His father, Jean Raparlier, a weaver, had settled there from one of the Belgian refugee colonies in the southern part of England, either from London, Canterbury, Sandwich, or Southampton, where he was born. Jean Raparlier's parents and his grandfather, Jean de la Raparlier, had fled to England after the Spanish capture and destruction of their ancestral city of Valenciennes in 1567, and they had landed in Southampton in September of that year. Valenciennes then a city in the French-speaking part of the Netherlands, was the first city which heroically opposed the tyranny of Philip, Lord of the Netherlands, and hereditary King of Spain. Those reverent martyrs, the well-known formulators of the Reformed Confession of the Faith, known as 'The Galic Confession', Peregrine de la Grange and Guido de Bray, preachers at Valenciennes, friends and probably relatives of the Raparlier family, had found their death and heavenly crown in 1567.

From family letters, in the possession of the New York Historical Society, based upon the statement of her great-grandson Gysbert Bogert, we know that Sarah Raparlier, daughter of George Raparlier and Cataline Tricaud, his wife, was born at Fort Orange (later Albany), on June 7, 1624, and not on the 9th of June as some have said. She was the first white girl born in New Netherland, the first-born white boy there being Jean de la Vigne, or an Finje, as named among the Dutch. A picture of the historical Raparlier Cradle, subsequently used for many children of that family, still exists. It is the first cradle of Huguenots in America and at the same time that of the white race in the Cosmopolitan Colonies of the Middle East.

A number of major poets in the United States trace their ancestry to Huguenots: Philip Freneau, often considered the first real poet; Whittier, the Quaker poet, was proud of his descent through his mother from Huguenot refugees who changed the name Feuillevert into Greenleaf. Longfellow counted Huguenots among his ancestors, as did Sidney Lanier.

Gilbert Chinard had the opinion that "in politics they (Huguenots) did not seem to have any clearly defined political doctrine. The fact that many of their descendants played an important role in the War of Independence and in the debates which preceded the Constitution has little significance in this matter. . . . Members of La Duzine of New Paltz never dreamed of giving opposition either to the governor or the royal government."[5] Possibly this is an explanation as to why many later migrated to Canada.

HUGUENOTS IN CANADA

Orientation to an Understanding of Huguenots in Canada

To understand the part that Huguenots have played in Canada two incontrovertible facts need to be realized. First, no study has ever been made of them in Canada although they have figured in her history since Jacques Cartier's time. Secondly, there has never been a Huguenot chronicler. What records we have of those early years have come from Cartier, Champlain, Lescarbot and the Jesuit Relations, all of them writing for a Roman Catholic public. This is particularly true of the Jesuit Relations for their purpose was definitely propaganda. They were meant to create in France an interest in missions among the Indians in Canada, and naturally anything detrimental for this purpose was omitted. This is even admitted by some Roman Catholic writers of that period. Mark what Le P. Camille Rochemonteux said: It is necessary

Dear Mrs. Jordan:

Mrs. Norma B. Ingles, Milan, Dutchess Co. N.Y. Historian, sent information about the Dutchess County Historical Society booklet on Surnames, and that you are searching for ROW family information.

So am I ! My Line ---

JOHN ROW - might have been the father or brother of FREDERICK ROW, was blind. He ran into a beehive - tipped it over - got seriously stung - GEORGE ROW used to show him around.

FREDERICK ROW - b. 1772 at ? - d. Sept 15,1854 at Parish, N.Y. Oswego Co. - bur. Bidwell Cemetery. married ELIZABETH b.1772 at ? - d. Feb 7,1852 at Parish, N.Y. In 1801 had Land Deeds in Schoharie Co. N.Y. in the Town of Schoharie and in the Town of Cobleskill. In 1842 he was "of Cobleskill". In 1844 he was "of Parish, N.Y.". They moved to Parish, N.Y. in 1842.

JOHN F. ROW - son of Frederick & Elizabeth, - b.1786 at Dutchess Co. N.Y. - d. ? - married 1st JERUSHA; 2nd SALLY. In 1834 had Land Deed in Oswego Co. N.Y.

GEORGE ROW - son of Frederick & Elizabeth, - b.1808 at Cobleskill,N.Y. Schoharie Co. - d. Mar 4,1872 at Parish, N.Y. Oswego Co. - bur. Bidwell Cemetery. Married 1st MARY; 2nd ADRIAN BURNSIDE. Moved in 1833 to Parish, N.Y. Oswego Co. He used to show the blind, John Row, around. He was my great grandfather.

Can you help me ? Can you suggest how I can find the parents, or birth, or marriage, or children of Frederick Row & his wife Elizabeth ? This July, we plan to spend a couple of days in Dutchess Co. I will gladly exchange any of my information with you.

Enclosed you will find a SASE for your convenience.

Sincerely,

Dear Mrs. Jordan:

Thank you so VERY MUCH for your reply to my letter. I appreciate the time you took to share information and offer some leads. I did not know there were so many Row (Rowe - Rauh - etc) until I began looking for my grandfather's ancestors.

I will watch for Mosher in the indexes in Dutchess Co. N.Y. and Xerox any thing that seem pertinent to Hugh Mosher, Jr. b.1690 & Sarah Davol and their son, Stephen Mosher b.ca.1745/50-d.in Dutchess Co. N.Y. & wife Catherine Rauh (Rowe) - mar. ca. 1767.

It would be nice to be able to spend ample time in the areas our searches pinpoint - but it usually interferes with family and financial obligations. We are hoping for one day in Schoharie Co. N.Y. and one day in Dutchess Co. N.Y. this summer.

Sincerely,

BOOK OF THE SUPERVISORS

INTRODUCTORY

"In publishing this little pamphlet the trustees of Vassar Brothers Institute desired to perpetuate the earliest known records of the Supervisors and Assessors of the County of Dutchess. It contains besides the tax lists and records of meetings a number of court records and miscellaneous accounts of various descriptions. Some of these, it is believed, will be of more than local interest, for they throw a certain amount of light upon the life of the times. There are records, for instance, of payments to the Indians of bounties for wolves' heads, and on page 33 is an obscure reference to a trip taken by one of the county officers to Kipsberg (Rhinebeck) on account of "the Business of a negro of Johanns Dickman that Wass burnt." Several historians have stated that a negro was burned at the stake in Dutchess County, at one time, but so far no actual record has been discovered of this event, unless it be this, which places it considerably further back than the date ordinarily assigned. Among the chief matters of local interest, and perhaps also of some general interest, are the records of the building of the first county house and prison in the County of Dutchess and of the establishment of the courts of common pleas and general sessions.

The original record book from which this publication is made is unbound, but is in fairly good condition considering the fact that two of the Dutchess County court houses have been destroyed by fire and two others torn down or rebuilt. It is one of a number of similar manuscript record books which together cover nearly all the colonial period of the county's organized existence. This one seems to have been unknown to Mr. Benson J. Lossing and to the authors of the two Dutchess County histories, though there are quotations from it in some of the historical sketches published in the Poughkeepsie newspapers about the middle of the nineteenth century. It has generally been tucked away under piles of other matter in the County Clerk's office, where it would never be discovered except by mere chance. It was copied verbatim et literatim by Mr. Henry Booth and the publication is from his manuscript, which follows exactly the paging as well as the spelling of the original.

A few words about the earlier history of the county will serve to make the records more intelligible to the general reader. "The Dutchess's County" was one of the twelve original counties of the Colony or Province of New York and was the fifth named in the act passed by the colonial legislature on November 1, 1683. Its boundaries were "to be from the bounds of the County of Westchester, on the south side of the high lands, along the east side of Hudson's River as far as Roelof Jansen's creeke and eastward into the woods twenty miles." Obviously, no county organization was possible at that time because exclusive of Indians there were not above three or four families living within its boundaries then so far as is known. The first Indian deed within the limits of the county is dated June 15, 1680. By 1685, however, crown grants or patents for lands were beginning to be made in Dutchess County, and before 1700 there was a group of three or four families living at Poughkeepsie, a few others near Fishkill and some on scattered clearings through the woods along the river. The county was under the jurisdiction of the courts of common pleas and general sessions of Ulster County until 1720, but there appear to have been justices of the peace in Dutchess before 1713, for on October 23rd of that year the colonial act required them to issue warrants for an election to be held "at any time before the first Tuesday in September next, there to make choice of one Free-holder, to be supervisor, one Treasurer, two Assessors and two Collectors." An election was probably held under this act before September, 1714, though there is no record of it, except that on the last page of this pamphlet is recorded a receipt for taxes dated the 13th of August, 1715, and the civil list gives Leonard Lewis as having represented the County of Dutchess in the fifteenth assembly, 1713–1714. By 1714, according to the colonial census then taken, 445 persons, of whom 29 were slaves, were living in the county. On July 21, 1715, an act was passed requiring the justices of the peace to call together the free holders to elect two of their number "to be supervisors and directors for the building and erecting a county house and prison." No location was prescribed in this act and evidently no action was taken, because on May 27, 1717, a second act was passed directing that the county house and prison should be erected "at or near the most convenient place at Poghkepse." This act definitely established Poughkeepsie as the county seat and the records of this book show that its directions were carried out. It will be noted that the county was then divided into three districts, or wards. The middle ward, extending from the mouth of Wappingers Creek to Esopus Island, is frequently mentioned as "the middle ward, or Poughkeepsie."

Chairman Committee of Publication.

THE FAMILIES OF HUGH ROE AND WILLIAM DUDLEY

By GEORGE McK. ROBERTS, ESQ., of New York, N. Y.

The will of Hugh Roe, dated 5 Aug. 1689, in Suffield, Conn., was recorded 3 Mar. 1690 in the Probate Court of Hampshire County, Mass., located at Northampton, Mass., as Suffield was then in Hampshire County. It mentioned among other children a daughter Mary Densloe, to whom he left £5. However, the original will is not on file, apparently having been lost, and there is the recorded copy only. As his daughter Mary married William Dudley in 1661, and they were both living in 1700, it appears that the name "Densloe" must be an error in copying the will into the registry book, volume 1, page 287.

The writer has spent over fifteen years in research on the Denslow family and has failed to find any authority for the oft-repeated statement that Mary Roe married a Denslow, aside from the recorded copy of Hugh Roe's will above mentioned, in which the name "Densloe" is believed to be an error of the recorder. Several accounts of the Dudley family refer to the wife of William Dudley as Mary Stoe or Stow,[a] and Mr. Dean Dudley, in his The History of the Dudley Family, pp. 303, 343, 344, and pedigree between pp. 96-97, refers to her thus. But in his "Supplement," p. 96, he corrects this and says that she was the daughter of Hugh Roe, "according to Roe's will." Whether at that time the original will was available for inspection is not determined. It may be conceded, however, that Mary Roe was never Mary Denslow.

The recorded copy of Hugh Roe's will shows that he signed with a mark, and the spelling "Rhoe" therein was doubtless an error of the scribe. The will of Hugh Roe, from an attested copy secured from the Registry of Probate at Northampton in 1929, follows:

Here Followeth a Coppy of the Last Will & Testiment of Hugh Rhoe deceased taken ꝑ Suffield August 5th 1689 This is the Last Will & testiment of Hugh Rhoe being verry sick & Weake in body but of perfect understanding & Memory—

Impr first I give my Soule unto the Lord who gave it & my Body unto ye Earth from whence it was taken & as for ye Estate which the Lord hath graciously given me I doe dispose of it as followeth my honest debts & funerall expences being discharged

First I give & bequeath my whole estate unto my Loveing Son Petr Rhoe, & my Grandchild John Werner whome I make joynt Executors of this my Last Will & they to take pr̃sent possession of ye same after my decease & to improve it unto ye best advantage save only it is to be understood yt they doe Honorably & Comfortably provide for & maintaine my beloved Wife Abigaile Rhoe for her life tyme & alsoe it is to be understood yt ye abovesd Petr Rhoe & John Werner doe pay my just debts & Legacies as after Followeth, as for my debts both former & later yt they be truely payd by both ye Executors as alsoe ye Legacies which Follow Only it is to be understood yt John Warner shall not be constrained to pay any of the Legacies untill one yeare after he comes unto ye age of twentie one years, & yt this my last Will may be duely & faithfully performed in every part of it I doe desire & appointe my Loveing Friends & Neighbors to take ye oversight of my Estate yt it may at all tymes responesable for ye performance of this Will & Doe hereby impower ym as overseers for yt end & Especially to

The Family of Hugh Roe

Hugh Roe, died at Suffield, Conn., 5 Aug. 1689; married Abigail ———, who died 3 Sept. 1689. Children:[b]

[b] The order of birth is not certain. Certain additional matter concerning the daughters Sarah and Elizabeth and their families has been supplied by the Editor-in-Chief.

i. Mary, b. prob. by 1643; d. between 1726 and 1728; m. (1) 4 Nov. 1661, William Dudley, b. at sea, 8 June 1639, d. at Saybrook, May 1700/1; m. (2) Richard Dart; see below.

ii. Sarah, b. prob. in or before 1653; d. after May 1681 and before Aug. 1689; m. before 1671 Daniel Warner, who d. at Farmington in 1679, son of John Warner. Apparently Daniel Warner had had a former wife by whom he had a son Daniel, b. abt. 1667, since the son Daniel survived but was not named in the will of Hugh Roe. Children (Warner): 1. John, b. abt. 1671. 2. Abigail, b. abt. 1673. 3. Samuel, b. abt. 1675, not named in Roe's will in 1689. 4. Thomas, b. abt. 1677. [See Manwaring's Digest of Hartford Probate Records, vol. 1, p. 375; and Col. Rec. of Conn., vol. 3, p. 84.]

iii. Esther, d. at Weymouth, Mass., 11 July 1655.

iv. Samuel, b. at Weymouth, 14 Jan. 1655/6; d. at Suffield, 1 Mar. 1687/8.

v. Abigail, b. prob. by 1660; d. at Suffield, 13 Oct. 1691; m. at Suffield, 15 June 1678, Thomas Taylor, b. 5 Oct. 1655, d. at Suffield, 6 Jan. 1740/1, son of Stephen and Elizabeth (Newell) Taylor. He m. (2) Hannah Granger, b. at Newbury, Mass., 15 May 1666,[c] d. at Suffield, 9 Sept. 1729, dau. of Launcelot and Joanna (Adams) Granger, by whom he had several children. Children (Taylor): 1. Elizabeth, b. 6 Sept. 1682. 2. Nathaniel, b. 22 Aug. 1684, d. 3 Jan. 1684/5. 3 Mabel, b. 1 Dec. 1685.

vi. Peter, b. prob. abt. 1662-64; d. at Suffield, 4 Feb. 1638/9; m. 24 Jan. 1688/9, Sarah Remington, b. at Rowley, Mass., 8 Dec. 1668, dau. of Thomas and Mehitabel (Walker) Remington. Children (Roe): 1. Samuel, b. 25 Nov. 1689, d. 29 Nov. 1689. 2. Abigail, b. 23 Sept. 1691. 3. Samuel, b. 30 Jan. 1693/4. 4. Sarah, b. 17 July 1696. 5. Elizabeth, b. 4 Mar. 1698/9. 6. Mary, b. 7 May 1701. 7. John, b. 4 Feb. 1703/4. 8. Mercy, b. 19 July 1706. 9. Thomas, b. 28 July 1708. 10. Hannah, b. 28 July 1711.

vii. Elizabeth, b. perhaps by 1665; d. by 1693; m. Thomas Merrill, who d. at Saybrook, Conn., 7 Nov. 1711. He m. (2) at Saybrook, 25 May 1693, Hannah Hill, by whom he had four sons. Children (Merrill): 1. Elizabeth, b. 13 Dec. 1685; m. 13 May 1720, Thomas Wells. 2. Thomas, b. middle of May 1688; d. s. p. at Saybrook in 1759.

It will be noted that, figured from known dates, all the children of Hugh Roe could have been born between 1643 and 1665, and hence could all have been by the same mother. There may have been other (unknown) children who died young.

The Family of William Dudley

William Dudley, born at sea 8 June 1639, was eldest son of William and Jane (Lutman) Dudley, the parents having been married at Ockley, co. Surrey, Eng., 24 Aug. 1636, and having come with the company that settled Guilford, Conn. The younger William was a deacon, and settled in Saybrook, Conn., where his marriage and the births of his children are recorded. He married, 4 Nov. 1661, Mary Roe, born probably about 1643, [c] Possibly the "daughter of Lancelot" born that day.

Uldrick, another son, was the grandfather of Capt. Samuel Snyder Winegar. Conrad Winegar, another son of Garrett, was a magistrate and prominent citizen of the town. His antique and quaint looking old house, which stood near the rocks in the rear of Samuel Hitchcock's house, remained until about 1820. His only son, Gerhard, or Garrett, the grandfather of Garrett H., was an officer in the Revolution, and died before the close of the war.

Lieutenant Samuel Snyder, who was one of the Palatines, and came here with them, was brother-in-law to Garrett Winegar, and his wife was the daughter of Henry Nase. His house was where John D. Barnum lives. He died in 1808, at the age of ninety-five.

Another family who it is supposed came to this town soon after the Winegars, and previous to 1731, were the Rows. They also were German, and are supposed to have been of the Palatines. "Johannes Rouh died in 1768, aged 72 years." He lived where the brick house now stands built by Henry Morehouse. He was the father of Nicholas, Sr., and William. The sons of Nicholas, Sr., were Nicholas, Jr., Samuel, Conrad and Garrett. Conrad lived where Walter Sherman lives, and Garrett built the Hilliard house, a stone building where Shadrac Sherman's house now stands.

The old houses built by these early settlers, of which there were as many as seven or eight near Amenia Union at the beginning of the present century, were objects of especial interest.

A pen and ink map * of the Nine Partners, executed previous to 1731, shows the dwellings in Amenia at that time. The dwelling of Mr. Sackett is shown, and Henry Nase's four near Amenia Union confirm the supposition that Mr. Row was here previous to 1731, and the location of one of the houses agrees with that of Mr. Row.

In 1725, Henry Nase settled in the south part of the town. His memorial stone, in the cemetery at Dover, says: "Henry Nase, born in High Germany, died Dec. 14, 1759, about 64 years old." His residence was near where his grandson, Cornelius, lived, but on the opposite or east side of the river. Here also his son, Philip, Sr., resided, who was the father of Henry, John, Philip, Cornelius and William. Henry, the oldest of these, being a Tory, emigrated to Nova Scotia after the Revolutionary war. The others occupied four contiguous farms in that beautiful agricultural district.

The families of Knickerbocker and Van Deusen were in the south part of the town at an early period. There is a deed, written in the Dutch or Holland language, bearing date 1711, from Herman Knickerbocker to Cornelius Knickerbocker. It appears to be of land occupied by Van Deusen, whose house was a short distance east of George T. Belding's.

Capt. Isaac Delamater came here previous to 1740, from Kingston, Ulster County, where the family had lived several generations. His father was Jacob, and his grandfather, Claude, who came to America after 1645 and before 1650. They were Huguenots, driven from France by the revocation of the edict of Nantes. They fled first to Holland and from thence came to America.

Capt. Delamater was a man of prominence in the town. He was famous as an eccentric magistrate. Many quaint things were said and done by him, but his integrity and good sense were never questioned. It is an accredited tradition that in judicial cases of importance he consulted his wife, who sometimes sat by his side in court. He was an extensive land owner. Martin remained at the homestead; Benjamin built a stone house north of Horace Reed's; John (Honnes), built at Leedsville the first mill erected in the town, and in 1761 he built the brick house now the property of Myron B. Benton. On the wall of this antique building are still to be seen the initials "J. M. D."—John and Mary Delamater. Isaac, Jr., lived on the farm now owned by Newton Reed, where he built a house, a portion of which is the residence of the present owner, and is now the oldest building in the town of Amenia.

The farm of Edward E. Cline also belonged to Capt. Delamater. Some quite celebrated men have descended from this family. A grandson of John Delamater of Leedsville, John Delamater, M. D., LL. D., was a distinguished physician and surgeon, and a professor in the medical institutions of Pittsfield, Mass., Fairfield, N. Y., and Cleveland, Ohio, in which latter place he died in 1867. Ex-Governor Todd, of Ohio, Ex-Vice President Colfax and William M. Evarts, are also members of this family. Capt. Isaac Delamater died April 20, 1775, the day after the battle of Lexington, and was buried in his own field.

Besides the settlers whose names have been given there was one named Baltus Lot, who lived

In 1984, searching among loose papers at the present courthouse in Chesapeake, VA, where the old Norfolk County records are housed, provided this researcher with an interesting item. An ancient scrap of folded paper was opened to reveal the document which is considered to be WILLIAM ROE's first license to keep an Ordinary in Norfolk Co., VA. Except for the few missing words, which were on the fold that crumbled when opened, the document reads, as follows:(40)

On what was anciently known as Costen's Island, at the Great Bridge in Chesapeake, VA, today there stands a newly-built restaurant called "Locke's Point." Mr. MATT W. RILEY, an engineer with the city of Chesapeake [and a researcher himself] told this researcher in 1984 that "that restaurant is setting just about where that fella' ROE had his Ordinary back in the early 1700s."

ROE/ROWE

A VICTORIAN'S REFLECTION ON THE SURNAME ROE

The purpose of these lines is to give a brief résumé of an historic old family name through a time period over 1000 years. The name ROE is of Norse origin and is not known to have a special meaning. In the (old) Norse language, names appear which commence with an R preceded by the letter H. The names ROLF, RANE, and ROE in pagan times were spelled HROF, HRANE, and HROE. Later on the letter H was omitted.

When Rolf the Ganger and his Norsemen invaded France and seized that region named for its conquerors, the name ROE was established at Rouen, the capital thereafter of the Dukes of Normandy. Gradually, by custom and from necessity, the followers of Rollo adopted the French language and the Norse was abandoned. The French spelling of ROE in the records at Rouen evolved into ROO, ROU, ROUS, ROUX, and LE ROUX. However, the pronunciation of the name remained unchanged.

ROU as a family name crossed the English Channel with William of Normandy in 1066. It is the Latin root of LE ROUX and means "red." Latin was the language by which the Normans governed England. It served as the universal language of medieval European courts. Eventually, Anglo-Saxon, or Old English, regained its use among the English nobility. Then ROE resurfaces as a surname. A few members of the family retained the Norman ROUS, which form is still in use today. Generally, the Norse ROE is most commonly found in Ireland, England, and America.

There is geographical as well as historical interest attached to the ROE name. In northern Ireland the river ROE meanders into Lough Fogle and thence into the North Sea. No doubt this river was named by ROE, a Norseman. ROE HAMPTON is a suburb of London and the original Anglo-Norman ROE hometown. ROESKILDE, or ROE'S FOUNTAIN, sits on Zeland Island in Denmark. Besides being Denmark's first capital, it is one of Scandinavia's oldest cities as well. Lastly, Virginia Land Company's Thomas Roe lent his name to a small harbor in the New World. We know it as SIR THOMAS ROE'S WELCOME and find it on North Hampton Island's coast--near the Isthmus of ROE--north of Hudson's Bay.

cultural pursuits throughout his life. In his political affiliations he was a Democrat. His death occurred in 1856; that of his wife in 1845. Their children were as follows: Cordelia, married Peter Youngs, a farmer of Dutchess county, and both are deceased; James E. is the next younger; John removed to the West, where his death occurred; Hannah E. is the wife of Morris Demers, a cooper, of Pennsylvania; Mary J. was married and removed to the West, since which time no news has been received of her; Helen became the wife of William Potts, formerly a farmer of Lagrange; Peter followed farming in Lagrange town until his death; Minard and Rachel both died in early life.

The subject proper of this review spent his boyhood days in the usual manner of farmer lads, his time being largely occupied by work on the old homestead, and to the pursuit to which he was reared he has always devoted his energies. He is ever an advocate of advancement, and ready to accept improved methods which his judgment countenances as practical. In his dealings he is strictly honorable, and his well-spent life commends him to the confidence and regard of all.

Mr. Van Kleeck was united in marriage with a daughter of David Rigar, and they resided on the old farm in Lagrange until 1869, when he sold his property there and came to his present farm. On July 4, 1895, he was called upon to mourn the loss of his wife, who was a most estimable lady.

JULIUS O. ROWE, one of the most prominent agriculturists of the town of Milan, Dutchess county, was born September 7, 1830, upon his present estate, which has been in the possession of his family for over 135 years.

Johannes Rowe, great-grandfather of our subject, and a German by birth, came in 1760 with some of his brothers to Dutchess county, where he purchased 911 acres of land from Chancellor Robt. R. Livingston, and much of this land is still in the possession of the Rowe family. For this land he paid £750, on which, in 1766, he built a stone house (still standing), and passed the remaining years of his life in the quiet calling of a farmer. Johannes Rowe died in 1771, and was buried in the family ground across the road from the church which bears the family name. He was twice married, and by his first wife had six children, two daughters—Mary (Mrs. James Stewart), Catherine (Mrs. William Stewart); and four sons—John, Sebastian, Philip and Mark; and by his second wife he had one daughter, Lydia—seven children in all. To each of these the father gave a farm in the town of Milan, and the boys all settled there and were prominent in the early history of the town; they built the Methodist church there, and were generous supporters of many local enterprises, from which that neighborhood still derives benefit. Philip had a son William P. Rowe, who served as a soldier in the war of 1812.

Mark Rowe, our subject's grandfather, married Catherine Pitcher, and reared a family of four sons: John, a farmer in the town of Milan, left no children; Garrett, a soldier in the war of 1812, was a farmer in Columbia county, and had six children, whose descendants still live there; William was a farmer in the town of Milan, and left several children; and Leonard Rowe, our subject's father, born at the present farm in 1801, became a farmer by occupation. He was married, in 1827, to Miss Eliza C. Reid, a native of the town of Milan. The Reids are of English origin, and the first American ancestors came at an early date, settling in New England. Peter Reid, Mrs. Rowe's grandfather, married Miss Thankful Beecher, of New Haven, Conn., and their son Ely was born in Connecticut, in early life coming to Dutchess county, where he met and married Miss Catherine Rowe, a native of the town of Milan (then Northeast). They settled in Rhinebeck-on-Hudson, where Ely Reid was a merchant for a number of years. After the marriage of our subject's parents, they settled at the old homestead, where they reared a family of four children: Julius O., Edward, Horatio, and Virginia A.

Leonard Rowe was very influential in local affairs, a leader in the Democratic organization, and for many years a supervisor and justice of the peace. Edward went to Minnesota in 1856, purchased a large tract of land on the Minnesota river where he improved a large farm, and resided there twenty-one years. His health failing, he rented his land and returned to Milan in 1887, where he died in 1889. Julius O. Rowe still resides with his brother and sister at Home Nest, the ancestral home of their parents, where in youth they received an academic education, fitting them for any

All literary matter on the stones has been omitted to economize space and all inscriptions have been reduced to a standard form. The use of brackets indicates uncertainty as to the lettering on the stone. Lists are arranged alphabetically, first by family names, second by the Christian names in one family. They are grouped by townships and in each town-group are presented in the following order: (1) family grounds, (2) churchyards, (3) community grounds. The abbreviations used are:

B.	= Born.	Wid.	= Widow.
D.	= Died, Day, Days.	A.	= Age.
Dau.	= Daughter.	Y.	= Year, Years.
S.	= Son.	M.	= Month, Months.
W.	= Wife.

To facilitate the use of these lists under the township-grouping the following summary of the civil divisions, land patents and racial stocks in Dutchess County is appended:

CIVIL DIVISIONS

1683. Organization of "the Dutchess's County." The territory originally included in the county has twice been reduced: (1) in 1717, when a strip at the north end was set off to Albany County (this strip now comprises the towns of Germantown and Clermont in Columbia County) and (2) in 1812, when the present Putnam County was set off to the south.

1717. Civil divisions instituted in the county, viz., North, Middle and South Wards.

1737. Civil divisions of the county reorganized and the following precincts created: Beekman, Crom Elbow, North, Poughkeepsie, Rhinebeck, Rombout and South Precincts.

1746. North Precinct extended across the Oblong and re-named Northeast.

1762. Crom Elbow Precinct divided into Amenia and Charlotte Precincts.

1768. Pawling Precinct set off from Beekman Precinct.

1788. Civil divisions of the county reorganized and the following townships created:

Amenia, from Amenia Precinct.
Beekman, from Beekman Precinct.
Clinton, from Charlotte Precinct.
Fishkill, from Rombout Precinct.
Northeast, from Northeast Precinct.
Pawling, from Pawling Precinct.
Poughkeepsie, from Poughkeepsie Precinct.
Rhinebeck, from Rhinebeck Precinct.
Washington, from Charlotte Precinct.

1793. Town of Stanford erected out of the town of Washington.
1807. Town of Dover erected out of the town of Pawling.
1812. Town of Red Hook erected out of the town of Rhinebeck.
1818. Town of Milan erected out of the town of Northeast.
1821. Town of Hyde Park erected out of the town of Clinton.
1821. Town of Pleasant Valley erected out of the town of Clinton.
1821. Town of La Grange erected chiefly out of the town of Beekman, and partly out of the town of Fishkill. It was first called Freedom.
1823. Town of Pine Plains erected out of the town of Northeast.
1827. Town of Union Vale erected out of the town of Beekman.
1849. Town of East Fishkill erected out of the town of Fishkill.
1875. Town of Wappinger erected out of the town of Fishkill.

LAND PATENTS

Settlers in Dutchess County took title to their lands under eleven royal patents.

1. The Rombout Patent, granted 1685. Covered the present towns of Fishkill, East Fishkill, Wappinger, a portion of Poughkeepsie and the western portion of La Grange.
2. The Sanders and Harmense Patent, granted 1686. Covered a portion of the present town and city of Poughkeepsie.
3. The Schuyler Patent, granted 1688. Covered a portion of the town and city of Poughkeepsie.
4. The Artsen-Rosa-Elton Patent, granted 1688. Covered the southwest corner of the present town of Rhinebeck.

5. The Pawling Patent, granted 1696. Covered the part of the present town of Hyde Park which was north of the subsequent Hyde Park Patent.

6. The Great Nine Partners Patent, granted 1697. Covered the present towns of Amenia, Washington, Pleasant Valley, the southern portions of the towns of Northeast, Stanford and Clinton, and that part of the town of Hyde Park which is south and east of Crom Elbow Creek.

7. The Rhinebeck Patent, granted 1703. Covered the present town of Red Hook and almost all of Rhinebeck.

8. The Beekman Patent, granted 1703. Covered the present towns of Beekman, Pawling, Dover, Union Vale and the eastern portion of La Grange.

9. The Hyde Park Patent, granted 1705. Covered the part of the present town of Hyde Park bounded east and south by Crom Elbow Creek and north by the Pawling Patent. The line between the Hyde Park and Pawling Patents was approximately the present northern boundary of the property of F. G. Landon.

10. The Little Nine Partners Patent, granted 1706. Covered the present towns of Milan and Pine Plains and the northern parts of Northeast, Stanford and Clinton.

11. The Oblong (a rectification of the boundary line between New York and Connecticut), created 1731. Covered a strip on the eastern border of the county, through the towns of Northeast, Amenia, Dover and Pawling.

RACIAL STOCKS

The colonial population of Dutchess County may be divided roughly into three classes,—the Dutch, the German and the English. There was a sprinkling of French (but negligible in number) and an occasional Scandinavian, Scotch-, Welsh-, or Irishman.

Settlement of the county occurred in distinct racial waves. The Dutch came first in a thin stream, from Albany and Ulster Counties chiefly, and in the approximate period of 1683-1725 they settled at scattered points in the valley of the Fishkill, of the Clove and of the Wappingers creeks, on the site of the city of Poughkeepsie and in the present town of Rhinebeck. From about 1730 to 1750 they came in good numbers from Long Island and Westchester County and concentrated on the Rombout Patent at the southern end of the county.

Palatine Germans were the predominant element in the northern end of the county, in Red Hook, Rhinebeck and Milan, although the Dutch were a close second in Rhinebeck. The Germans came to Dutchess from the Palatine camps in Albany and Ulster Counties and arrived approximately 1715-1730.

From 1730 to 1775 emigrants from New England came into Dutchess and settled large areas in the eastern and central sections of the county. They also penetrated into almost all of the previously settled parts. This English stock gave the final color to the character of the county as a whole. The Dutch and German languages disappeared from common speech and the English tongue was permanently established.

JOHN T. HASSAM.

EDWARD PARKS citizen & merchant tailor of London, 23 January 1650. To wife Mary Parks, in lieu of her thirds, fifteen hundred pounds (in various payments) and one third of the plate and household stuff, and all that my freehold messuage or tenement with its appurtenances, &c. which I lately purchased of William Pennoyer of London, merchant, wherein I now dwell, in the parish of Stepney, being the North western part of that great messuage formerly the possession of the Right Hon. Henry Earl of Worcester. My wife to have the education of my children.

If my son Henry Parks shall within three months, &c. and after notice given, release and quitclaim, &c. all his part of all my goods, &c. (according to the custom of the city of London) and release to George Jackson of Sandhurst in the county of Kent all his part of lands, &c. in Maidstone in the County of Kent which I lately have sold to George Jackson, then I give & bequeath unto him three hundred pounds (in various payments). And further I give & bequeath unto my said son Henry Parks and his heirs forever, in consideration as well of the release by him to be made to my brother George Jackson of the lands in Maidstone, &c. all my messuages, houses, lands, tenements & hereditaments situate, lying and being in New England in the parts of America beyond the seas.

If my son Edward Parks, within three months next after notice given him of my death and after he shall attain the age of twenty & one years, release his part of personal estate according to purport of an indenture, dated 26 June 1640, between me the said Edward Parks, of the one part, and Thomas Westby of Fresby in the county of York, gentleman, and Edward Gell of Brimington in the county of Derby Esq., of the other part, then I give and bequeath unto the said Edward three score pounds for his preferment & placing him to apprentice. To my son John five hundred pounds within three months after he attains the age of twenty-one years, and to sons William & Stephen (the same amount with the same limitation). To daughter Elizabeth Parks five hundred pounds at twenty-one or day of marriage. To sons Thomas, Dannett, Francis & Samuel (legacies similar to their brother John's above). To Mark, Francis & Susan Wilcox, three of the children of my sister Alice Wilcox, ten pounds apiece, & to Anne Wilcox another daughter twenty pounds, to be paid, the sons at twenty-one and the daughters at that age or day of marriage. Bequeaths to the widow Brewer, to Martha Wilson now wife of Thomas Wilson, being both my late servants, to my daughter Mary, now wife of Thomas Plampin and my two grand children Thomas and Edward Plampin. Reference to lands in Hadleigh in the county of Suffolk lately bought.

My son in law Thomas Plampin and cousin John Bagnall, both of London, merchant tailors, to be my executors and my brothers Dr William Forth and Dannett Forth of London, woollen draper, to be overseers. A Thomas Forth a witness.

The above will was proved 29 January 1650; but the executors having died before fulfilling their trust a commission was issued 29 March 1673 to John Parkes, a son & legatee. He also died before completing his administration, and commission was issued 3 November, 1681, to Mary Cawley als Parkes, the widow relict of said defunct, &c. Grey, 10.

[A full abstract of this will was printed in a note in Mass. Hist. Soc. Collections, 4th S., vol. vii. p. 385, from a copy obtained for me by Col. Chester. The note was appended to several letters from Edward Parks to John Winthrop, Jr. These show that Parks terms Henry Bright of Watertown his uncle. In the genealogy of the Brights of Suffolk, Eng. (Boston, 1858), we find on pp. 270–71, an abstract of the will of Mrs. Elizabeth Dell, sister of Henry Bright, in which she mentions her nephew William Parks. She also mentions her brother Henry Bright, William Forth and —— Blowers, her sister Martha Blowers, her cousin —— Cawby, Esq., and her nephew Dr. William Forth.

Henry Parks, son of Edward, sold in 1655, his land in Cambridge to John Stedman, and very probably came here for the purpose. This particular branch, however, then ceased to have any connection with New England. But at Cambridge one of the early settlers was Dea. Richard Parke, 1638–1655, whose son Thomas had a son Edward. At Roxbury was William Parke, whose will of 20 July, 1684, mentions only three daughters and their children, brother Thomas Parks of Stonington, deceased, and brother Samuel with his sons Robert and William. Savage says that these three were sons of Robert of Wethersfield and New London, who died in 1665. Very probably this Robert was the man who wrote to John Winthrop in 1629 from Easterkale in Lincolnshire (see Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll., 5th S. vol. i. p. 194), proposing to go to New England.

These may have been relatives of Edward Parke, who was clearly allied to Winthrop through the Forths. The family name of Dannett ought also to lead to some trace of this family.

The Alice Wilcox, sister of Edward Parks, recalls the William Wilcockes of our Cambridge, who died in 1653, leaving a widow Mary (Powell) but no children, and a sister Christian Boiden in Old England. A John Wilcox was of Dorchester, 1661, and went to Middletown. The names Wilcox, Hastings, Fox and Hall are in the Leicestershire Visitations, and Wilcox also in Rutland.—W. H. Whitmore.]

William Goore of Nether Wallop in the county of Southampton gentleman, 9 November 1587. To wife Joane, eldest son William, all my land called Garlacks. To my four youngest sons Richard, John, Nicholas and William Goore the younger all my land in Newington, in the county of Wilts, and in Basingstoke, in the county of Southampton, and two hundred pounds apiece. To my four daughters Agnes, Elizabeth, Barbara and Margery Goore two hundred pounds apiece. The executors to be my eldest son William Gore and Margaret Reade, the supervisors to be John Pittman of Quarley, Thomas Elie, Clerk vicar of Nether Wallop and Leonard Elie of Wonston.

10 May 1588. Emanavit comissio Will^mo S^t John armigero marito sororis naturalis et ltiñe dict def et Leonardo Elie generoso uni supervisorum &c. cum consensu W^mi Gore filii &c. durante minori etate eiusdem Willmi et Margarete Reade als Gore alterius executorum &c.

Rutland, 37.

William Gore of Nether Wallop in the county of Southampton, gentleman, 22 January 1655, proved 29 March 1656. Wife Elizabeth to be sole executrix. To the poor of Nether Wallop three pounds to be distributed in one month after my decease. To my wife a portion of my now dwelling house at Garleggs in the parish of Nether Wallop and part of the orchard. To my cousin Richard Hamon. To Amy Singer, daughter of my late sister Margaret, and Jane Singer, another daughter, and Roger Singer, a son. To my cousin Mary Poore the now wife of John Power thirty pounds. To Nicholas & Margaret, son and daughter of my late sister Wallingford, twenty pounds apiece in one year after my decease. To my cousin Nicholas Gore, son of Nicholas Gore late of Farley deceased, ten pounds in one year. To Nicholas Hatchet of Nether Wallop five pounds in one year. My brother in law Mr Robert Sadler, my cousin John Poore and my cousin Richard Miller of Broughton. To the now five children of Richard Hamon forty pounds apiece and to William Poore and Elizabeth Poore, son & daughter of my late cousin William Poore deceased, forty pounds, and to the now children of my late cousin Thomas Singer deceased, forty pounds. To my godson Richard Sherfield, son of my late brother Roger Sherfield, gentleman, deceased. If my cousin Nicholas Wallingford shall have issue of his body or Margaret Wallingford have issue of her body then, &c. To John Gore, son of my late uncle Richard Gore. To my uncle Hugh Mundy. Berkeley, 110.

[In these Goore wills Mr. Waters is evidently probing the connections of the ancestors of our Merrimac Valley settlers. The villages of Wallop, like those of Choulderton, lie upon the edges of the Counties of Wilts and Southampton, and when Dummer, Saltonstall and Rawson, with their English associates, had arranged for developing a stock-raising town in New England, they arranged also to secure from co. Wilts and its vicinity the transfer of a colony of practical men not only accustomed to the care of live stock, but to the trades which interlaced in the products of a stock-raising community. The matter of first importance was to secure ministers with whom the community would feel at home. Rev. Thomas Parker and his relatives the Noyes family, natives of Choulderton, were secured, and with them the Wiltshire men were glad to join.

In the will, proved 28 March, 1657, the names of many of the Poore family are mentioned as cousins of the testator, and so is Nicholas Wallingford, who came in the Confidence from Southampton in 1638, with others—Stephen Kent, John Rolfe, John Saunders, John and William Ilsley, and more recruits to join their relatives who established the town of Newbury. Joseph Poore, of Newbury, married, 6 August, 1680, Mary Wallingford, daughter of Nicholas, born 20 August, 1663. Anthony Sadler was a passenger in the same vessel. In the Visitation of co. Wilts in 1623 are pedigrees of the Sadler family on p. 63. The son and heir of the family given there is Robert Sadler, born in 1608, who may have been the person mentioned as "brother-in-law" in the will given above.

The will proved in 1588 contains an instance, not uncommon at that period, but a terrible annoyance to genealogists, of two sons having the same baptismal name—eldest son William, and four youngest sons, among whom is William the younger. The name of Margaret Read recalls the fact that the Read and Noyes family intermarried in the locality of these testators.—John Coffin Jones Brown.]

which had wrought so well his grandfather in establishing the paper and building it up and where later likewise were brought to the business the younger blood and enthusiasm of his sons, Edmund and Benjamin, who at the period of Benjamin Jr.'s initiation into the establishment were figuring so conspicuously in bringing affairs to the most modern state, and to the then young clerk's credit be it said that aside from the natural inheritance of the forceful traits of character which had, as the years had come and gone, not only established a great newspaper and business, but made their influence felt in society, in the church and in the public affairs of the community, he brought to the enterprise the prestige of distinguished ancestry and a liberal education that foreshadowed the able, wise and judicious conduct of affairs that his accession to the establishment brought to it when fell upon his shoulders the mantle of uncle and father. On the death of Edmund Anthony, Jr., in 1902, Benjamin Anthony became president, and Benjamin Anthony, Jr. succeeded the latter as treasurer and business manager, when became manifested his enterprise and public spirit in keeping abreast of the times in installing new machinery and equipment. On the death of his father, in the year 1906, he succeeded him as president of the corporation, and continued in the treasurership, both of which offices he has since continued to most admirably fill. A man of fine executive ability and of that type of forceful, progressive business man that is so often seen in these twentieth century days, Mr. Anthony is keeping pace in the conduct of the Standard with the best journalism of the day, and in the most rapidly growing city in New England.

In the year 1894 Mr. Anthony purchased an interest in the New Bedford Morning Mercury, and in January, 1903, he was instrumental in having the business of the concern incorporated. On the death, in 1906, of Mr. George S. Fox, the then treasurer of the Mercury Publishing Corporation, Mr. Anthony became his successor.

Mr. Anthony is a member of the American Newspaper Publishing Association, and for a number of years served on important committees of the association. He is a member of numerous clubs in New Bedford and Boston, among them the Wamsutta and Dartmouth of the former city. While at Yale he was commodore of the Yale Yacht Club in his junior year, and business manager of the "Yale Record" in his senior year. He spent some seven months abroad in travel in Europe in the year 1900, mainly in a business venture.

In his political affiliations Mr. Anthony is a Republican. In 1908 he was honored by his party, being chosen to serve as presidential elector—the third successive member of the family to receive such honor, uncle, father and son, the first named serving two terms and the others one term each, making four consecutive terms for the family.

On Sept. 25, 1888, Mr. Anthony married, at New Bedford, Mass., Harriet D., born March 17, 1866, daughter of Charles H. Peirce and Charlotte Hinckley (Smith) Peirce, of New Bedford, and to them have come children: (1) Edmund was educated in the Friends' Academy, New Bedford, Hotchkiss School for Boys at Lakeville, Conn., Sanford School, Redding Ridge, Conn., and St. Paul's Cathedral School, at Garden City, Long Island. He is now a clerk in the office of the Standard, at New Bedford. (2) Margaret. (3) Catharine Chandler.

Mrs. Anthony is a direct descendant of Michael Peirce, who came from England not far from 1645 and located in the following year in Hingham, thence going to Scituate, from whom her line is through Ephraim, Ephraim (2), David, Jonathan, John, Asa and Charles H. Peirce.

HON. WARREN A. REED. The Reed family of Brockton, Mass., a leading member of which is Judge Warren A. Reed, lawyer and jurist, who for over a third of a century has been one of the foremost citizens of that community, and during the greater part of that long period connected with the judicial, civic and financial interests of the city, district and State, is one of long and honorable standing in this Commonwealth, and one the forerunner of which came to these shores over two hundred and fifty years ago. Many members of this historic family have given good account of themselves, and many are there who have been prominent in the history of this country. An account of the branch of the family to which Judge Reed belongs is here given in chronological order, beginning with the earliest American ancestor.

(I) William Reade, born in 1605, sailed from Gravesend, in the County of Kent, England, in the "Assurance de Lo," in 1635, for America. He settled in Weymouth, Mass., and was made a freeman Sept. 2, 1635. He bought a house and land in 1636. Mr. Reade was among the early settlers of Weymouth, it having been made a plantation May 8, 1635; and Rev. Mr. Hall and twenty-one families settled there. Mr. Reade was a representative from Weymouth in 1636 and 1638. The Christian name of his wife, it is supposed, was Ivis. Their children were: William, born Oct. 16, 1639; Esther, born May 8, 1641; Thomas (died Nov. 14, 1719); John, born in 1649; Mary, who married Thomas Dyer; and Margaret, who married John Vining.

(II) William Read (Reed) (2), son of William and Ivis, born Oct. 16, 1639, in Weymouth, Mass., married in 1675 Esther Thomson, of Middleboro, Mass., daughter of John Thomson and his wife Mary (Cooke), the latter the daughter of Francis Cooke, of the "Mayflower" company. In 1675 William Reed was constable in Weymouth, in those times the chief officer of the town. In 1680 he was selectman, and a representative to the General Court. He dealt extensively in land. His will was proved Sept. 12, 1706. To him and his wife Esther were born: William; John, born July 10, 1687; Jacob, born Nov. 6, 1691; Bushnor; Porter; Mercy; Mary; Hester; and Sarah, born March 21, 1694.

John Thomson, father of Esther, landed in this country at Plymouth in one of the early embarkations. He finally settled and built a log house thirteen miles west of Plymouth, on the confines of what was then called Plymouth, now Halifax and Middleboro. He lived there until his house was burned by the Indians in 1675, when he and the other families fled to Plymouth. At the close of the war in 1677 they all returned and took possession of their estates, and rebuilt their houses. While living there, either he or his wife would walk to meeting every Sunday. The only place where they had an elder to speak to them was Plymouth—a distance of more than thirteen miles. It is said that during one year of his residence there his wife, on two of the Sabbaths in June, after breakfast, took a child six months old in her arms, walked to Plymouth, attended meeting, and returned home the same day.

Francis Cooke, grandfather of Esther (Thomson) Reed, was an Englishman. He was with the Pilgrims at Leyden, and married in Holland. He and his son John embarked on the "Speedwell," at Delftshaven, in July, 1620, leaving behind his wife Hester and the other children, at Southampton, or Plymouth, England. They were transferred to the "Mayflower" and in her set sail from the latter place on Wednesday, "6/16" September, 1620. He signed the compact in the cabin of the "Mayflower" on Saturday, "11/21"—November, 1620, the ship finally landing at Plymouth, Mass., Dec. 25, 1620. Up to 1645 there was hardly a year in which he did not serve the public in some capacity. His frequent service on the grand inquest and trial juries, and as a surveyor of highways, makes it clear that he was a man of sound judgment and had the respect and confidence of the community.

(III) John Reed, son of William and Esther, born July 10, 1687, married (first) Sarah, and after her death (second) Mary. His children, all but the first born of the second marriage, were: John, born Aug. 10, 1713; James, born Oct. 12, 1716; Mary, born Dec. 21, 1719; Ezekiel, born Nov. 14, 1721; Peter, born March 29, 1723; Squire, born May 25, 1725; Silence, born Aug. 10, 1728; Betty, born April 8, 1730, and Samuel, born July 13, 1732, the latter two dying young.

(IV) Ezekiel Reed, son of John and Mary, born Nov. 14, 1721, married in 1742 Hannah Beal, a direct descendant of John Beal, who came from the County of Norfolk, England, in 1635, and settled in Hingham, Mass., which town he represented in the General Court of the Colony in 1649. The children born to Ezekiel and Hannah were: Ezekiel, born March 3, 1744; Hannah, Nov. 1, 1746; Squire, Nov. 1, 1748; Mary, Jan. 1, 1751; Zebulon, March 31, 1752; Mary (2), Nov. 20, 1754 (married in 1775 Simeon Gannet); Samuel, Dec. 25, 1756; Issachar, Aug. 9, 1759; Deborah, Dec. 6, 1762 (married Dec. 18, 1783, J. Gurney).

(V) Ezekiel Reed (2), son of Ezekiel and Hannah, born March 3, 1744, in Abington, married April 2, 1768, Mary Rogers, of Marshfield, born Feb. 26, 1748-49, in that town, a direct descendant of John Rogers, of Scituate and Marshfield, of the former place as early as 1643-44, and removing to Marshfield about 1647, from whom her descent is through Timothy, Timothy (2), and Samuel Rogers and his wife, Experience (Thomas). "The making of tacks by hand," says Hayward's Gazetteer of Massachusetts, "commenced very early in Abington. The first attempt was to cut up old iron hoops into points by a very imperfect kind of shears, and take them up one by one and place them in a common vise, and screw up and unscrew for the purpose of heading each tack with a hammer. From this process they were called cut tacks; but the mode of making by hand was much improved by movable dies placed in an iron frame, in the shape of an ox-bow; the two ends, in which were placed the dies, being brought together by a lever pressed by the boot. In the first process, a man might make one thousand tacks per day; in the latter eight thousand. This was a great improvement, and the inventor, Mr. Ezekiel Reed, was entitled to a patent. He made some attempts to conceal the operation; but it was simple, and so

The following letter, copied from the original in possession of J. W. Thornton, Esq., has been published in the Historical Magazine, but its genealogical interest authorizes its republication here :—

LONDON, y^e 5 Sept. 1672.

Dear Coussen,—I have recd yours by your Brother Symonds, whom I did only see once, wherein I doe not only heare of your life but of many others; I desire to be thankfull to God who hath soe provided, disposed and blest you with the blessing of Children, y^e Lord make them blessings to you that they may be blest in themselves. God having given them grace, and counted them worthy, having attained unto learning if it please the Lord to make them instrumental to serve Christ in Church or state it will be happy. And now before I goe any further I must take you of [f] from suspition of unnaturalness, which I cannot in the least charge my selfe with, all you [are] pleased to say; I may remember I saw such a one in [New ?] England for that I doe not remember I ever saw you above once, which was at your mother's house In New England; but I very well remember you from a child, and when you were in Holland, you and your cousin John Lake, with us, and rejoyce you were under soe worthy a person for tuition as your grandfather; besides, I well remember your family of y^e Eppes, for I was brought up with them from my youth and received many kindnessess from them, they being worthy persons. I know not any that came from thence that I saw, but I made inquiries after you; while your mother lived we constantly wrote one to another, and she always gave me an accompt [of] her children and y^e blessed condition of your sister Est * * * who was a pretious christian, and of your sister M * * *

[Large portion of the MSS. torn off.]

I shall trouble you no further at this time, but desire my affectionate love to your wife and all your children, my service to your father Symonds, my coussen, and not forgetting old Mr. Bourman, Mr. Rogers and their wifes if alive; my great respects to them; I should be glad to hear of them; soe desiring y^e Lord to bless you and y^m I remain your loving kinswoman, LIDIA BANKES.

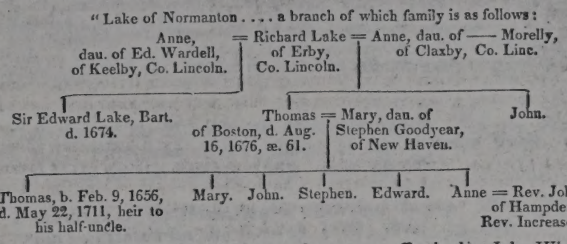
I had much respect for your Aunt Lake, but just as I was writing, I heard of her death; if there be any of her children remember mee to them.

My sister Reade and coussen Samuel present their service to you, and would have wrot but that they hope you have recd their letters.

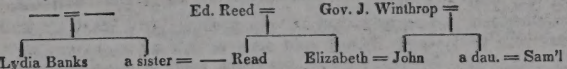
It is evidently addressed to Daniel Eppes of Ipswich, who m. Elizabeth, daughter of Hon. Samuel Symonds, and died Jany 8, 1693, aged about 68. Symonds married for his second wife, Rebecca, widow of Daniel Eppes: She died July 21, 1695, aged 78, and if her first husband was father of our Daniel, she was not his mother.

The "aunt Lake" was, without doubt, Mrs. Margaret Lake, who died in Ipswich, Sept. 1672, and it seems probable the rumor had reached England of her probable decease. This Mrs. Margaret Lake of New London is called by Roger Williams, in a letter to Gov. John Winthrop of Connecticut, (see History of New London, p. 44,) "your dearest and Kind sister." It has been surmised that she was sister to Winthrop's wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Col. Edward Reed of Wickford, Co. Essex, a stepdaughter of Hugh Peters.

The following Pedigree of the Lakes is from a manuscript compiled by J. W. Thornton, Esq.:—



The only explanation of the puzzle we can offer is that John Winthrop's wife had a brother who married Lydia Bankes' sister Reade, and thus Symonds, called a cousin, would be a kind of connection, and we might assume that the term cousin meant only a relative, as often happens. Thus,



And Eppes would likewise be a relative. I think it very probable that the relation was through the Symonds and not through the Eppes or Lakes. The Symonds were of Yieldham, Co. Essex, as well as the Reeds, while the Lakes were settled in Lincolnshire; and I should judge the presumption would be that there was no marriage between these families, settled at such a distance apart.

Could Eppes' cousin, John Lake, be the son of Mrs. Margaret Lake, and she be the widow of John, the brother of Thomas Lake? I fear conjecture will run riot on these points, and despair of any solution, until the Reed pedigree be carefully investigated.

contributing an unusual proportion of college students. Such a work is a good service, not alone to history, but to literature and religion. It is a good citizen's best legacy to his town. Long, at the pleasant homestead of Vinehill—the place, if not the name, is familiar—may the author survive to administer it. A good portrait of the author is presented, tables of statistics, indexes and family registers recommend the book. Vermonters will find this still another needed history.

Collections of the Massachusetts Historical Society. Vol. VI. Fourth Series. Published at the charge of the Appleton Fund. Boston: Printed for the Society, 1863. 8vo. pp. 602.

Proceedings of the Massachusetts Historical Society. 1862, 1863. Boston: Printed for the Society, 1863. 8vo. pp. 503.

These two volumes, which were issued on the 1st of April, are among the most important and interesting of those yet published by the Society. The volume of Collections is composed of letters in the Winthrop MSS., which are an immense mass of documents relating to the early history of New England, preserved by one branch of the descendants of the governor, and now in the possession of the Hon. Robert C. Winthrop. In this instalment are letters from Humphrey, Johnson, Downing, Peters, Cradock, Endicott, Bradford, Winslow, Williams, Coddington, Hopkins, Eaton, Haynes, Fenwick, Pyncheon and Hooker, mostly directed to Gov. John Winthrop; as well as some from English sympathizers with the colonists. The importance of these letters can hardly be overrated, such an insight do they give us into the difficulties which attended the planting of New England, and into the character of the leading men of the colony.

We will pass, however, to another point deserving notice. Several pages of autographs and seals, are here given, which will be of great use to the genealogist in tracing the families, and we are especially glad to see the first step taken towards calling attention to the value of these evidences.

The genealogical items in these volumes are not many, but are very interesting. In the collections we find the will of Isaac Johnson, and a note on p. 40 d., by Mr. Somerby, gives the probable record of Emanuel Downing's birth from the Register of the Church of St. Lawrence in Ipswich, co. Suffolk. "It is, '1585, Emanuell, the sonne of George Downing, Capt. ye 1 of January.' George, the father, describes himself in his will, proved 3d Oct., 1611, as a schoolmaster of Ipswich."

We also find in Hugh Peters' letters many allusions to his connexions, the Reades and Lakes, and the will of Edmund Reade, printed in the Transactions, clears up some doubtful points. It seems that Edmund Reade of Wickford, co. Essex, left a widow Elizabeth (who m. 2dly, Hugh Peters); sons, William, Samuel and Thomas; daughters, Margaret, wife of John Lake, Martha, wife of Daniel Epps, and Elizabeth, who became the second wife of John Winthrop, jr., Martha Epps m. secondly, Samuel Symonds of Ipswich, Mass., and the grandchildren of Edmund Reade (viz., John Lake, Anna Lake, Daniel Epps and Elizabeth Epps), are all recorded in our New England registers. A letter published in the Reg., XIII, 115, contains a farther notice of these families.

The volume of Transactions contains several papers read before the Society, the most important being one by Mr. George Livermore, on the Opinions of the Founders of the Republic on Negroes as Slaves, as Citizens, and as Soldiers. T. C. Amory, Jr., in a paper on the streets of Boston, gives an account of the different maps of the city; Col. Aspinwall defends his opinion that the Narraganset Patent was invalid, and Dr. Appleton shows that the Society possesses a fine impression of the very rare Great Seal of New England. The memoirs are those of Hon. Daniel Appleton White by Rev. Dr. Walker, and of Hon. William Appleton by Rev. Chandler Robbins—both of them interesting accounts of noteworthy men.

Notes on William Vassall, and on a letter from Charles II to one of the Winthrops, are interesting, as is also Mr. Deane's citations from Cotton Mather's diary.

These volumes are as usual, beautifully printed and carefully illustrated. We hope that another collection from these valuable MSS. of Mr. Winthrop, will soon be issued.

are engraved, except three, Mr. Field informs us, were originally made by or for him, and have always been his property, though they have, with his consent, been used to illustrate the Brooklyn Manual and the Park Reports.

Much of the historical material here found has been obtained from personal narratives and other sources which are peculiarly liable to destruction, and which require the most assiduous care to collect and sift the facts. Several of the articles have before appeared in the Brooklyn Manual, though the author has since corrected and extended them by additional particulars. The present volume is only a selection from the materials which he has gathered concerning the revolutionary, colonial and Indian history of Long Island. It is his intention to publish in future volumes other selections from these materials, which consist of "the manuscripts of Gen. Woodhull and Gen. Johnson, the journal of Prison-Ship captives, accounts of the Indian tribes, the poetry and ballads of the Revolution," and other equally valuable papers.

We shall look with interest for the succeeding volumes. One hundred and ten copies, only, of this volume, have been printed. J. W. D.

Ancestry of Priscilla Baker, who lived 1674–1731, and was Wife of Isaac Appleton, of Ipswich. By WILLIAM S. APPLETON. Cambridge: Press of John Wilson & Son. 1870. 8vo. pp. 143.

In this beautifully printed volume Mr. Appleton gives us a collection of valuable facts relating to several of the early colonists, far exceeding the modest promise of the title-page. The first eighteen pages refer to the Baker pedigree, commencing with John Baker, of Norwich, England, who emigrated hither in 1637 and settled at Ipswich. His son, Thomas Baker, married Priscilla, daughter of the Deputy Governor Samuel Symonds, and their oldest child was Priscilla Baker the wife of Isaac Appleton.

Pages 19–102 are given to an account of the Symonds family, and pp. 103–131 to the Reade family; the concluding pages relate chiefly to the Swaynes. We see, therefore, that in the somewhat indefinite word "ancestry," is in reality implied an account of two distinguished families in Massachusetts.

The name of Samuel Symonds is of frequent occurrence in our early records. He was the son of Richard Symonds, of Great Yeldham, co. Essex, a gentleman of good family and position. He came to New-England in 1637, and was repeatedly appointed to office here, for which positions his training as cursitor in chancery had specially fitted him. He was an assistant from 1643 to 1672, and deputy governor from 1673 till his death in October, 1678. His first wife was Dorothy Harlakenden, by whom he had twelve children, and who died before his removal hither. His second wife was Martha, daughter of Edmund Read, step-daughter of Rev. Hugh Peter, and sister of the second wife of Gov. John Winthrop, of Connecticut. She was the widow of Daniel Epps. By her he had four children, one being Priscilla, who married Thomas Baker. His third wife was Rebecca, daughter of Bennett Swayne; she had been thrice a widow, and survived her fourth husband. Notwithstanding that Gov. Symonds had sixteen children he had no grandson in the male line to perpetuate the name. Savage's Dictionary, however, points out several other emigrants of the name whose descendants still flourish in this country.

Martha (Read) Epes or Epps, the second wife of Gov. Symonds, was the daughter of Edmund Read of Wickford, co. Essex, whose great-grandfather was of the same place and died in 1534. Martha Read's mother married secondly the famous Hugh Peter; her sister Elizabeth married John Winthrop, Jr.; her sister Margaret married John Lake and came to New-England; her children by her first husband, Epes, came also to this country; and lastly her brother's sister-in-law, Lydia Banks, was of Salem for a while.

Such are some of the leading genealogical data to be gleaned from this interesting volume. Such a brief abstract, however, does little justice to the care and perseverance displayed throughout its pages. Every link in the chain is substantiated by wills and parish records, until the collection of facts may be termed complete. Various relationships which have heretofore been inexplicable are here made evident. In brief, not only has there been an unbounded expenditure in obtaining materials from every source at home and abroad, but the author has been able to arrange and control his accumulations, and to present them to the reader in due form and order.

The work is one of the best specimens of printing that we have seen, and the various tabular pedigrees inserted are a great assistance to the reader. W. H. W.

[This will, which I communicated very briefly to the Mass. Historical Society in January, 1890, was a welcome find as confirming my supposition that Elizabeth, wife of Edmund Reade of Wickford, was daughter of Thomas Cooke of Pebmarsh. Chapter Seventh Cerdic, King of the West Saxons.

Alfred the Great.
Colonel George Reade.

The direct descent from Alfred the Great was brought in the last chapter to Frances Dymoke (daughter of Sir Edward Dymoke and his wife, Lady Anne Talbois), who married Sir Thomas Windebank. Their daughter, MILDRED WINDEBANK, in 1600, when sixteen years of age, (at St. Martins-in-the-Field), married Robert Reade, a son of Andrew Reade and his wife, Miss Cooke of Kent County, and a grandson of Sir Richard Reade. It is claimed that a remote ancestor of the Reade family was Rheda, a convert to Christianity in the early centuries, King of Dal Reada, part of Scotland, and descended from the ancient rulers of Ireland. The name has known many forms and appears in many distinguished lines of descent, as well as many notable places, such as "Reading," which signifies the descendants of Reade. This ancient town of Berkshire, England, in 871, was the headquarters of the Danes.

From Scotland, the descendants of Rheda are said to have gone to Northumberland, there establishing the Barony of Redesdale (the dale of Prince Rheda), and here, in the fifteenth century, lived Robert of Redesdale, who, according to tradition, was murdered by his brother, and who also, according to tradition, was the original of the remarkable carving, called "The Giant," which appears, cut in the stone of an eminence upon the banks of the River Reed, in Redesdale.

The early ancestors of the Reades claimed descent also from Alexander, King of Scotland, from Malcolm Canmore, Prince Llewellyn of Wales, Edward the First of England, and also from many of the noble and famous families, among them de Mowbray, de Chaworth, de Welles and de Talbot.

The conspicuous branches of the family, all believed to have come from the same ancient stock, are the Borstall, Brockett Hall, Shipton Court, Ipsden House, Blackwood and Faccombe. The Faccombe branch, of Faccombe Manor (to which was attached the living of Faccombe Rectory), also owned lands in the County of Cork, Ireland, and the Manor of Linkenholt, Hampshire, England.

At the time of the Doomesday survey, the Manor of Linkenholt belonged to Ernalf de Herding. Later, it came into the possession of Thomas Wriothesly (afterward Lord Wriothesly), and in 1546 he conveyed it to Sir Richard Reade. From him it passed eventually to his son, Andrew Reade (of Faccombe), who, upon the marriage of his son, Robert Reade, to Mildred Windebank, conveyed it to this Robert Reade with a moiety of said manor to Mildred Windebank Reade for her life.

Andrew Reade and his wife had four daughters and five sons, the latter being Henry, Robert, George, John and Andrew.

The will of Andrew Reade, father of these children, is dated October 7, 1619. It was probated October 24, 1623. The eldest son, Henry Reade, born 1566, married in 1593 at St. Martins-in-the-Field, Anna, daughter of Sir Thomas Windebank, and sister of Mildred Windebank, who married Robert Reade, brother of the above Henry Reade. Henry Reade and his wife, Anna Windebank Reade, had two sons and three daughters. One of these sons, William Reade, had a son, Laurence Reade, who married in England, and came to America late in the seventeenth century. He made his home in New York City, and here his children reached maturity and became identfied with the affairs of the new world. A son, Joseph Reade, became King's Counsel and a vestryman of old Trinity Church. Among the descendants of Joseph Reade was Sarah Reade, who married Dr. Thomas Braine (and left a daughter, Elizabeth A. Braine of Brooklyn), and Mary Reade, who married Reverend William Vesey, rector of Trinity Church, New York City. Robert Reade, baptized 1551, will dated December 10, 1619, second son of Andrew Reade and his wife, married, as already stated, Mildred Windebank, also a daughter of Sir Thomas Windebank, of Haines Hill, Parish of Hurst, Berkshire, and his wife, Frances, daughter of Sir Edward Dymoke, of Scrivelsby Manor House, Lincolnshire, hereditary champion of England, who has already been presented in these pages). Sir Thomas Windebank was clerk of the signet to Queen Elizabeth and King James. He died October 1607, leaving a son, Sir Francis Windebank baptized at St. Martins-in-the-Field, London, August 21st, 1582. He was secretary of state to Charles the First, and had as his own secretary his nephew, Robert Reade, son of Robert Reade, senior, who had, besides this Robert Reade, Andrew Reade, D.D., of Lurgershall, Wiltshire; William Reade, Reverend Thomas Reade, born 1606, died 1669 (fellow of Oxford, 1626; LL.D., 1638; principal of Magdalen Hall, Oxford, 1643), and George Reade.

George Reade, son of Robert Reade and his wife, Mildred Windebank, came to Virginia in 1637. His mother's will is dated August 15th, 1630, so both father and mother were dead when he came to Virginia, and from certain letters to his brother, Robert Reade, written from Virginia about that time, it would seem that the latter was in charge of the family estate. In 1637-8, he was living at the Governor's home in Virginia, and wrote to England for two servants. In August, 1640, a letter from the king to the governor of Virginia and his council, commands them to admit George Reade to the place of secretary, in the absence of Mr. Kemp, then in England. From these facts it is evident that George Reade was a young gentleman of distinction, and it is not surprising that he advanced rapidly to positions of honor and responsibility. He was secretary of the Colony, 1637; acting governor, 1638; burgess from James City County, 1649, and from York, 1656; was elected member of His Majesty's Council, March 13, 1657-1658, and again in April, 1658-1671. He held this office until his death, and was also colonel of militia. Will probated November 20, 1671.

He married Elizabeth Martian, daughter of Captain Nicholas Martian, of York County, whose home was upon the present site of Yorktown. Nicholas Martian is said to have been a Frenchman, born 1591, who went to England, was naturalized there, and came to America some time prior to 1620. He was justice of York County, 1633-1657; burgess for York, 1623; for Kiskyache and the Isle of Kent, 1631; and for Kiskyache, 1632-1633. His will, dated March 1, 1656, recorded in York County, April 24, 1657, divides his estate between his daughters, Elizabeth, wife of Colonel George Reade; Mary, wife of Lieutenant-Colonel John Scasbrook; and Sarah, wife of Captain William Fuller, who was at one time governor of Maryland.

The will of Elizabeth Reade, widow of Colonel George Reade, was proved January 24, 1686-1687.

To Colonel George Reade and his wife, Elizabeth Martian, were born twelve children, among them:

Mildred, Robert, Francis, Benjamin, Thomas, and Elizabeth.

1. Mildred Reade, who died about 1694 (her will is dated January 4, 1694); married Colonel Augustine Warner, second.

Colonel Augustine Warner (father of Colonel Augustine Warner, second), the first of the name in America, came to Virginia prior to 1630. He was born November 28, 1610; died December 24, 1674. He was justice and burgess for York County, 1652; burgess from Gloucester, 1656; member of the Council and colonel, 1659-1674.

He married Mary, surname unknown, born May 15, 1614; died August 11, 1662. (These dates are taken from her tomb in the family cemetery.) They established "Warner Hall," in Gloucester County, Virginia, which is said to be the oldest colonial house now in existence, having been built about 1635.

To Colonel Augustine Warner and his wife, Mary, were born two children:

Sarah Warner, who married Colonel Laurence Townley (they were ancestors of General Robert E. Lee) and Augustine Warner, born October 20, 1643; died June 10, 1681. He was educated at the Merchant Tailors' School, London, England, where he matriculated as "Eldest son of Augustine Warner, Gent.," when only eleven years old. Was burgess, 1674, and Speaker of the House of Burgesses, March, 1675. He was member of the Council, 1676-1677. His patent is in the Virginia Library. He was also lieutenant colonel of Gloucester county militia, 1680.

To him and his wife, Mildred Reade, were born several children, among them:

I. Mildred Warner, who married in 1690, Laurence Washington, born 1661, died 1697 (son of John Washington, immigrant, and his wife, Anne Pope).

To them were born, 1692, John Washington, who married Catherine Whiting, and Augustine Washington, who married, first, 1715, Jane Butler; second, Mary Ball (March 6, 1731), born 1708. To Augustine Washington and his second wife, Mary Ball, were born several children, among them George Washington, President of the United States. The third child of Mildred Warner and her husband, Laurence Washington, was Mildred, born about 1696, who married Roger Gregory. To them were born three daughters: Frances, who married, 1736, Colonel Francis Thornton. Mildred, married, 1740, Colonel John Thornton. Elizabeth, married Reuben Thornton. These three Thorntons were brothers, sons of Colonel Francis Thornton, of Caroline County, and his wife, Mary Taliaferro. They were also brothers of Mildred Thornton, who married Dr. Thomas Walker.

II. Mary Warner, who married February 17, 1680 (Colonel) John Smith, of "Purton," Gloucester County, Virginia. He held a civil office 1680, as Mr. John Smith. Their son, Augustine Smith, married Sarah Carver. Their daughter, Sarah Smith, married Robert Throckmorton, and had a son, Warner Throckmorton, who was the father of Mary Throckmorton; she married Dr. William Taliaferro. They were grandparents of William B. Taliaferro, of Gloucester County.

III. Elizabeth Warner, who married Councillor John Lewis.

2. Robert Reade, son of Colonel George Reade and his wife, Elizabeth Martian, married Mary Lilly, daughter of John Lilly, and granddaughter of John Lilly and his wife, Dorothy Wade; the latter was a daughter of Armiger Wade and his wife, the heiress of Edward Malson, or Moulson, of York County; Margaret Reade, daughter of Robert Reade and his wife, Mary Lilly, married Thomas Nelson. They were grandparents of General Thomas Nelson, and ancestors of Thomas Nelson Page, the distinguished novelist.

Samuel Reade, son of Robert Reade and his wife, Mary Lilly, had a daughter, Frances, who married Anthony Robinson, High Sheriff of York County.

3. Francis Reade, son of Colonel George Reade and his wife, Elizabeth Martian, married first, Jane Chisman, and had Mary Reade (who married Edward Davis of King and Queen County, and Elizabeth Reade, who married Paul Watlington). Francis Reade married second, Anne ——, and had George, Anne and Benjamin Reade.

4. Benjamin Reade, son of Colonel George Reade and his wife, Elizabeth Martian, married Lucy; their son, Gwynne Reade, married Dorothy (subsequent pages give their descendants).

5. Thomas Reade, son of Colonel George Reade and his wife, Elizabeth Martian, who married Lucy Gwynne. She was a granddaughter of Colonel William Bernard, a lineal descendant of Lady Margaret le Scrope, who traced back through several genera-

WURTS' MAGNA CHARTA provided a brief accounting of the feudal headquarters of some of the Magna Charta Barons. Some of the castles have been badly damaged. Some have disappeared entirely. Often we can learn of them through Medieval and Renaissance accounts, and some of them require the discerning eye of the archeologist. Others await the evidence brought out with a shovel and pick, by the trained archeological historian.

A portion of the information concerning Surety Baron HENRY de BOHUN is as follows:

HENRY de BOHUN, the Surety, was born before 1177. He became the first Earl of Hereford of this family, for he was so created by the Charter of King John, dated 28 April 1199. Even though he took the Barons' side against the King, on becoming Earl of Hereford he had promised that he would never make any claim against John or his heirs, on the basis of a Charter given to his great uncle Roger by Henry II. The office of Lord High Constable of England he inherited from his father, but he seems to have played no other active part in John's government. As he took a prominent part with the Barons against King John, his lands were confiscated, but he received them again at the granting of Magna Charta. Having been excommunicated along with the other Barons, he did not return to his allegiance on the decease of King John, but became one of the commanders in the Army of Louis the Dauphin, at the Battle of Lincoln, and was taken prisoner by William Marshall. After this defeat he joined Saire de Quincey and other Magna Charta Barons in a pilgrimage to the Holy Land in 1220, and died on the passage 1 June 1220. His body was brought home and buried in the chapter-house of Llanthony Abbey in Gloucestershire.

His wife, Maud FitzGeoffrey, was the daughter of Geoffrey FitzPiers, Baron de Mandeville, and his first wife, Beatrix Saye.

The name of Bohun suggests Hereford. Unfortunately, Hereford Castle no longer exists. It was built in 1048, and apparently consisted of a moat and bailey. The mound has been leveled to the ground, but the bailey is outlined by high banks. One report has it that all that remains is a platform and a piece of a ditch.

The Castle was once situated near the present Bishop's Palace. It was seriously battered in an attack in 1055, but it was restored, and was again in use in 1067. The site which it now occupies is a public garden, gay with shrubbery and flowers. An ornamental lake indicates where once was the moat, but the outlines of the walls are shown only by grass covered ridges.

Appreciation is expressed to Reed M. W. Wurts, one of the Heralds of the Society for furnishing the Baron's Shield on this page.

Description:
Located in eastern Virginia, Kingston Parish was a part of eastern Gloucester County until 1791 when t parish became Mathews County. This database is a collection of parish records between 1749 and 182 contains birth, marriage, and death information for over 6500 people. Each records reveals the event c birth, baptism, marriage, or death. In the case of death records, the page number in the original regis the record appears is provided as well. Because nearly all other county records were destroyed by fire 1820 or 1865, this is an important collection for researchers of eastern Virginia ancestors. A copy of th register is maintained in the archives of the Virginia State Library.

Extended Description:

From 1677 to 1691 the Rev. Michael Typerios and James Bowker were ministers, but when their minis or ended is not known. In the year 1740 the Rev. John Blacknal appears on the first page of an imperf book. It cannot be ascertained how much of the vestry book was lost, or how long Mr. Blacknal may h before 1740. He died in 1747, and was succeeded in 1750 by the Rev. John Dixon, the Rev. Richard Lc served meanwhile for three months. In the year 1770 Mr. Dixon resigned and died in 1777. Four appli appeared for the parish, the Revs. Thomas Baker, Thomas Field, Arthur Hamilton, and Archibald Avens Mr. Field was chosen, Mr. Baker having previously served three months. In the year 1778 Mr. Field eit resigned, and the Revs. Robert Read and William Dunlop were candidates - the former being chosen. I 1784 the Rev. Thomas Hopkinson became the minister, and in the year 1789 the Rev. James McBride. Rev. Armistead Smith became the minister and was ordained by Bishop Madison. (Vestry Book of King

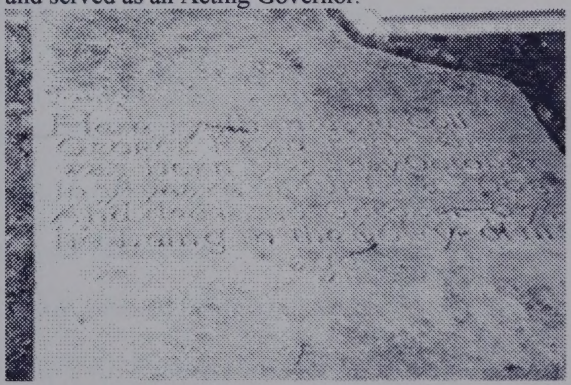
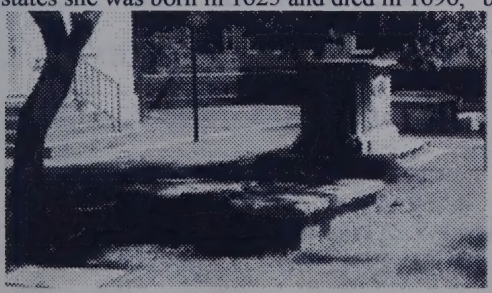
George Reade

George Reade, a native of London, came to Virginia 1637 in Sir John Harvey's party. Harvey was returning to Virginia to assume the office of Governor of the Colony. Reade was appointed Secretary of State, pro tem of the colony in 1640 and served as Acting Governor in the absence of Governor Harvey. He was a member of the House of Burgesses and a member of the Colonial Council until his death. His will was filed November 21, 1671. George Reade married Elizabeth Martiau, daughter of Nicolas Martiau (Father of Yorktown). Their daughter Mildred, wife of Col. Augustine Warner, was the g-grandmother of George Washington. Our line descends through his daughter Elizabeth, wife of Capt. Thomas Chisman.

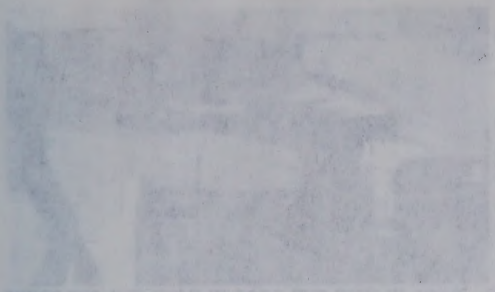
George Read, the son of Robert Read of London and his wife Mildred Windebank, was one of the about one hundred colonists, who emigrated to the colonies from England and Wales before the end of the 17th century, known to have legitimate descent from a Plantagenet King of England. He was a member of the Colonial Council, Secretary of the Colony, and served as an Acting Governor.



"Adventurers of Purse and Person 1607 - 1624/5 and Their Families" published by the Order of First Families of Virginia, indicates in a footnote (pp. 419-420) the discrepancy between the dates inscribed on his Grace Church tablets and the filing of the wills for George Read and his wife Elizabeth as follows: "His and his wife's gravestones were discovered during street excavations in Yorktown in 1931. The inscriptions on both were recut with errors. George Reade's stone now states he died Oct. 1674, "he being in the 66th yr of his age." Since the date should be 1671 (per his will), either the age shown, or his year of birth, is in error as well....The gravestone of Elizabeth (Martiau) Read now states she was born in 1625 and died in 1696, "being in ye 71st yeare of her age." Since the year of death should be 1686 (per her will), again the age or year of birth is in error. Since Nicholas Martiau claimed...his daughter Elizabeth as headrights...it would appear Elizabeth was born prior to his arrival in Virginia in 1620...and that Elizabeth's birth occurred in 1615 rather than 1625."



The graves of George Reade and his wife Elizabeth were discovered while excavating on Buckner Street in



Yorktown. In 1931, descendant Letitia Pate Evans had the tablets restored and moved to the church yard of Grace Episcopal Church. The Reade tablets sit adjacent to the plots of Gov. Thomas Nelson (Declaration of Independence signer), his father, and grandfather (who married a George Reade descendant.)

Descendants of Henry Stephens

Generation No. 1

1. HENRY[5] STEPHENS (NICHOLAS[4], THOMAS[3], EDWARD[2], HENRY[1]) was born 20 July 1656, and died 09 October 1689. He married ELIZABETH GALLUP, daughter of JOHN GALLUP and HANNAH LAKE.

Notes for HENRY STEPHENS:
AFORETIME:

There are no written family records, letters, or documents of an early date, to settle beyond doubt the ever-pressing query, who was the father of Henry Stephens or Stevens of Stonington, Connecticut. A very common tradion is that three brothers, Thomas, Richard, and Henry Stephens, Came to New England about the year 1660 and that Henry settled in Stonington, Connecticut. No mention is made of father or mother, or the place whence they came.

In a history of a county in New York State, the following is given: "The subject of this sketch is of English origin. It is related that as early as 1660 three brothers, Thomas, Richard and Henry Stevens, settled in this country; that they distinguished themselves as soldiers in King Philip's war, and served as colonels."

In another appears: "The subject of this is of English origin. It is related that three brothers--Thomas, Richard and Henry Stephens--came to America from Ireland sometime during King Philip's war, served said war as colonels.

There is no doubt that Henry was a private in King Philip's War, but I can find no record of the service of either Thomas, or Richard in any capacity.

Another story is given after this fashion: "Nicholas Stevens, or Stephens, who had been a Brigadier General in Oliver Cromwell's army, came to Taunton in Massachusetts in the year 1669. He had three sons, Nicholas, Thomas and Henry. Nicholas settled in Taunton or Dighton, and his son, Nicholas resided there with his family. One of his sons, according to the best information to be obtained, settled near Boston. His name was supposed to be either Thomas or Ebenezer."

Both of these traditions agree that one of the brothers was named Thomas, and there was a Thomas

He had three sons, Nicholas, Thomas and Henry. Nicholas settled in Taunton or Dighton, and his son, Nicholas resided there with his family. One of his sons, according to the best information to be obtained, settled near Boston. His name was supposed to be either Thomas or Ebenezer."

Both of these traditions agree that one of the brothers was named Thomas, and there was a Thomas Stephens, whose name appears on the list of free inhabitants of Westerly, Rhode Island, and removed to Stonington, Connecticut, where he died May 14, 1736. His will was probated June 4, 1736.

No children were mentioned in the will, nor are any found recorded at Westerly, Rhode Island, or Stonington, Connecticut. He is believed to be one of the brothers of the traditions and this view is confirmed by the late Honorable Richard A. Wheeler, historian, of the town and church of Stonington, Connecticut, who has reportedly stated that Henry Stephens, of Stonington, and Thomas Stephens of Westerly were brothers.

Richard Stephens of Taunton, Massachusetts, a contemporary of Henry Stephens of Stonington, Connecticut, married about 1666, Mary Linkon, the widow of William Hacke, and daughter of Thomas Linkon of Taunton.
Their children were:
Richard, b. March 6, 1667; accidentally killed in 1785/86.
Nicholas, b. February 23, 1669; m. Remember Tisdale; m. 2nd, Annie Spier.
Mary, b. June 8, 1672; m. May 24, 1694, Ephraim Miner of Stonington, Connecticut.
Thomas, b. February 3, 1674; m. September 28, 1699, Mary Caswell; lived in Norton, Massachusetts.
Tamasin, b. July 3, 1677; m. May 5, 1698, Edward Wilcox of Westerly, Rhode Island.
Nathaniel, b. July 4, 1680; m. Hannah; removed to Roxbury, Massachusetts.

Dighton, Massachusetts, formerly a part of Taunton, was incorporated in 1712. Nicholas, the son of Richard, lived there. He married first, Remember Tisdale, Born July 8 1675, daughter of John Tisdale.
Children of Nicholas and Remember (Tisdale) Stephens:
Richard, b. April 21, 1698; m. MAy 14, 1725, Priscilla Jones.
Nicholas, b. February 24, 1702; m. August 21, 1724, Rachel Andros
Joseph, b. April 23, 1704; m. Lydia
Isaac, b. October 22, 1706
Josiah, b. November 23, 1707; m. March 20, 1734/35 Sarah Pool; m. September 27, 1739, Mary Tuels, daughter of Benjamin Tuels of Dighton, Massachusetts.
Hannah, b. October 6, 1710

Nicholas Stephens married second, Anna Spier March 12, 1712/13. Their children were:
Annie, b. May 8,, 1715; m. Joseph Jones of Taunton
Mary
Robert, m. January 3, 1745, Mary Hathaway.

Mrs. Mary L. Paige of Taunton, Massachusetts, a descendant of Richard Stephens of Taunton, and his son Nicholas, writes: "As is well known, our Richard was son of Thomas, who came later, but it is not thought stayed or died here." Mrs. Paige furnished the following affidavit:

"Jonathan Lincoln of Norton, in ye County of Bristol, in ye providence of ye Mass Bay, in New England, being in ye eighty second year of my age, testifies and says that he well remembers on Richard Stephens of Taunton, in said County, and he appeared to be an old man when I was young, and that it was always said that he came from Plymouth, in old England, and that he was a Cloather and worsted comber by trade, and that some time after ye said Richard came, his father, whose name was Thomas, and mother, and sister Catharine, and some time, others of ye family came over to Taunton, ye said Richard married a person whose maiden name is Mary Linkon, and had by her four sons, to wit, Richard, Nicholas, Thomas and Nathaniel, and two daughters, to wit. Mary and Tamsin, all these I knew except Richard. I then understood, died young and unmarried, the other three, Nicholas, Thomas, and Nathaniel are deceased and left children: the said Nicholas had six sons to with, Richard and Nicholas (who are both now deceased) and Joseph, Isaac, and Josiah, who are now living, and Robert who I know nothing of but by heresay, the said Joseph being ye eldest son of ye said Nicholas who is now living. The Deponant further says, he lived in s'd Taunton in s'd County until he was 26 years of age, tghe he moved to Norton, which is joining to Taunton and further saith not.

Jonathan Lincoln
Norton, Nov. 9, 1768" (Bristol Co. Records, Vol. 53, P. 514.)

Katharine Stephens, the "sister Catharine", mentioned in the above document, married, January 5, 1669/70, Thomas Deane.
Children:
Thomas, b. February 1, 1670;d. February 26, 1670
Hannah, b. 14 February 1671; d. January 2, 1749
Thomas, b. 1673; d. September 10, 1747; m. January 7, 1696/97, Mary Kinsly of Milton
Deborah, m. John Tinsdale
Katharine, m. April 17, 1701
Lydia, m. George Hull of Easton
Mercy, m. Daniel William February 1, 1719
Elizabeth, b. 1688, d. in Norton, March 18, 1758 m. December 4, 1707, Dea. Benjamin Williams

The first tradition, the Taunton, and Dighton records, the affidavit of Jonathan Lincoln, and the account of Thomas Stephens, of Westerly, Rhode Island, are consistent, and would afford a reasonable solution of the immigrang ancestor and kin, were it not for the second tradition about the father named Nicholas, of whose existence no written record has been found among any of the families decended from Henry Stephens of Stonington, and no tradition respecting him among the decendants of Richard Stephens of Taunton.

It is well known that many of the settlers of New England, who came over after the accession of Charles the Second, as King of England, in 1660, had taken part under Cromwell and Parliament against the forces of King Charles the First and it is very probable that some of our family were of that number. It is very easy in the absence of written records, to misplace names and to give that of a son to the father, or brother. Military titles are frequently magnified in our day and there is no reason to believe that it is confined to our era.

So far, circumstantial evidence favors the first tradition and would name Richard of Taunton, as the brother of Henry Stephens of Stonington, and would make Thomas the Ancestor. But the factg that Thomas returned to England and died there, prevents us from calling him the Immigrant Ancestor, so we begin our American Ancestry with a most worthy sire, that sturdy New England pioneer, Henry Stephens or Stevens of Stonington, Connecticut.

If Henry Stephens came to New England about 1660 the Fones record which is here given is a probable clue to his place of abode before he settled in Stonington, Connecticut.

The Narraganset Country was anciently bounded weserly by Paucatuck River, southerly by the Atlantic Ocean, easterly on the Narraganset Bay embracing the Island, and on the See Konk River, and northerlyh and westerly as far as the present bounds of Rhode Island extend, but how much further in that direction cannot now be ascertained.

DATES

From the 13th Massachusetts Report on Public Records, 1901, Pages 33-34, is taken the following: "Until 1752, when Parliament fixed January 1 as the commencement of the legal year, it commenced with March 25 (the Feast of the Annunciation), and the custom was quite general of calling a month by its numbered name. The months were numbered as follows: March 1, April 2, May 3, June 4, July 5, August 6, September 7, October 8, November 9, December 10, January 11, February 12. Under this plan the following forms of entry were common: 10. 7 mo. 1641; 10-7-1641; 10-7ber 1641; meaning September 10, 1641. The legal year, until and including 1751, commenced with March 25, the year 1752 with January 1. Prior to 1752, as the legal year did not terminate until March 24, it is often the custom to continue the figures belonging to the months of the chronological year from March 25, to December 31, inclusive, through January. February and March to the 25th of the next legal year. To illustrate:

following the date December 31, 1641, will be found entries in regular succession dated January, 1641, February 1641, and March to the 26th, 1641. Consequently, to determine the correct historical or chronological date in January, February or March prior to 1752, it is necessary to look back to the preceding December or forward to the following April. A more general custom, however, was to double dates in January, February, and March to the 25th, and the following forms of dating will be found: 1641/42.

TITLES

"The title Mr. was applied to captains, and sometimes to mates of vessels; to military captains; to eminent merchants; to schoolmasters, doctors, magistrates, and clergymen; to persons who had received a second degree at college, and who had been made freemen. The wives and daughters of such individuals were called Mrs. To be deprived of this address was deemed a serious degradation. The usual appellations of adults, who were not Mr. and Mrs., were goodman and good-wife before their respective surnames. Taking these terms in their radical meaning, it is not strange that they were sometimes, if not often, misapplied.
"Distinctions of this sort generally continued, till the Colony was merged in an extensive province, under Joseph Dudley, 1686, when the custom of making and recording freemen seems to h ave ceased, hence these distinctions gradually fell into disuse." (From the History of Ipswich, Essex, and Hamilton, Massachusetts.)
Some of the unmarried granddaughters of Henry Stephens of Stonington used the prefix of Mrs. as late as 1743.

THE SPELLING
Henry Stephens and Henry Stevens are both used in the Stonington, Connecticut records, but on the land-books, where the deeds and agreements are copied, the name is more frequently written Stephens.

Thomas, the eldest son, who settled in Plainfield, Connecticut, used the Stevens mode and so did all of the sons, there and at Canaan, Connecticut, and all the famiy, except the descendants of Uriah of Canisteo, have continued to use that form, so far reported. At Canisteo, all use the Stephens form.

Richard, the second son, used the Stephens form, but his son, Ebenezer, changed to Stevens and all of his decendants continue to spell that way.

Henry, the youngest son, generally spelled his name Stephens, but sometimes Stevens. Most of his decendants, except the Abel Stevens branch at Canaan, use the Stephens form.

CANAAN, CONNECTICUT

In 1739, Uriah and Samuel Stevens, sons of our Thomas of Plainfield, Connecticut, settled in Canaan, and nearly all of this family within a few years were located there. Uriah, Andrew, and Benjamin were very prominent in the town affairs, holding the positions of Selectmen, Town Clerk, Representative to the Colonial Legislature, Incorporator of the town, and Captain of Militia.

In 1748 Ebenezer, the son of Richard was an inhabitant. Between 1750 and 1752 Henry and Jedediah Stephens, sons of Henry, settled there, and were followed by many others from Stonington.

There are still members of the Stevens family residing in Canaan who are decended from the early settlers.

THE STILLWATER, NEW YORK COLONY

From the old record-book of the Church of Christ of Canaan, Connecticut, is taken the following: "April in ye year 1762--At a fast appointed to know our duty in respect of this Church moving to Stillwater, it was fully agreed this church should remove from Canaan to Stillwater and pursuant to sd agreement ye greater part of sd church members have removed to sd Stillwater."

The old record-book was taken along and used by the church after it located at Stillwater. The house of worship is located some distance from the Village of Stillwater, and is called the old Yellow Meeting House. It is now united with the Presbyterian body.

Most of the Stevens family who went to Stillwater were children of the brothers, Thomas, Uriah, and Samuel.

THE WYOMING VALLEY

The General Assemblyh of Connecticut passed an Act early in January 1774, erecting all the territory within her charter limits from the river Delaware to a line fifteen miles west of the Susquehanna into a town, to be called Westmoreland, with all the corporate powers of other towns in the Colony, attaching it to the County of Litchfield. It extended from the Lehigh north to Tioga Point, now Athens. The section above mentioned was the Wyoming Valley country, which was claimed by Connecticut and settled by people from Connecticut. It was the scene of the Indian massacre in 1778.

HENRY STEPHENS

Henry Stephens, also written Stevens, was an early settler in Stonington, Connecticut, though not one of the very earliest. His name is on the first census list, taken, February 2, 1668, as given by Honorable Richard A. Wheeler, in his history of the town of Stonington, from which I quote:

"In 1667 the planters convened in town meeting, and decided to set apart and lay out five hundred acres of land, to be styled the ministry land, the avails of which were to be applied to the support of the gospel ministry."

"In July of the same year the town established what they called a town plot, and appointed a committee to lay out as many lots as there were inhabitants then living in the town. Their home lots contained twelve acres each and were so arranged that each lot had a street front."

Two hundred acres of this ministry land was laid out around the place where the road meeting house now stands, the eastern line of which extended along a few feet east of said meeting house running nearly north and south. The western boundary was Mistuxet brook. The northern and southern lines cannot now be traced, but the form of the plot can nearly be seen when we look at the distance between the east and west line and the number of acres that were laid out."

"The home lots were laid out around and upon each side of the ministry land; they extended as far east as Smith mill, one tier was located north and the remainder west and south of said land."

"In 1668 a census of the inhabitants of the town was ordered to be taken, embracing those only who were inhabitants or heads of families; February 2 there were found to be forty-three inhabitants, viz.

Thomas Stanton, Samuel Cheesbrough, Thomas Stanton Jr., George Dennison, Thomas Miner, John Gallup, Ames Richardson, James Noyes, Elisha Cheesborough, Ephraim Miner, Moses Pamer, James York, John Stanton, Thomas Wheeler, Samuel Mason, Joseph Miner, John Benett, Isaac Wheeler, John Dennikson, Josiah Witter, Benjamin Palmer, Gershom Palmer, Thomas Bell, Joseph Stanton, John Fish, Thomas Shaw, John Gallup Jr., John Frink, Edmund Fanning, James York Jr., Nathaniel Beebe, John Reynolds, Robert Sterry, John Shaw, John Searls, Robert Flemin, Robert Holmes, Nathaniel Cheesbrough, for Mrs. Anna Cheesbrough, his mother, Gershom Palmer for Mrs. Rebecca Palmer, his mother, Henry Stevens, and Ezekiel Maine."
"A home lot was laid out for each inhabitant and title was obtained by lottery on the following conditions, namely if built upon within six months and inhabited, the title would be complete, except that proprietor must reside on his lot two years before he could sell it, and then he must first offer it to the town and be refused before he could sell the same to any person and give good title."

The New England General Register, Vol. 47, pages 459-460, bives the second census, contributed by George A. Gordon, A. M., from which I quote:

"The town record reads as follows: The record or register of the Inhabitants names Taken this 29th of December 1670: by the select men of Stoneington according to a town order fformerly made th 15th of November 1670, Mr. Stanton, senior 21. The number after each name refers to the number of the lot drawn. Henry Stephens was admitted as inhabitant July 1, 1672.

At the outbreak of King Philip's War, Henry Stephens was near Swansea, Massachusetts, and hastily wrote to hiks friend and neighbor, Thomas Stanton Sr., of Stonington Connecticut, the letter which is here given, as printed in the 3d series, Massachusetts Historica Collections, Vol. 10, Page 117.

original is as good as the spelling. J. B. (This is, perhaps the first report of the breaking out of hostilities in Philip's War sent to Connecticut. J.S.)):

Henry Stephens served in the war, and was one of the volunteers who received a grant of land in the town of Voluntown, Connecticut, for such services.

For a complete list of those who were recogniczed as having served, see "The History of King Philip's War", by Henry M. Bodge, pages 441-446; Narraganset History Register Vol. I pages 144 to 147; and the Voluntown, Connecticut Records.

Henry Stephens was Selectman in Stonington, Connecticut for the years 1696-7-8-9, 1702-3-4-7, and represented the town in the General Court of Colonial Legislature for the years 1699, 1700-1-2-6-7. He was one of the incorporators of the town of Stonington, October 24, 1716. He married Elizabeth, one of the daughters of Captain John and Hannah (Lake) Gallup. She was born at Stonington, but the dates of her birth, death, and marriage have not been found.She and her husband were admitted to the Congregational Church, February 6, 1726. He was an extensive land owner, having property in Stonington, North Stonington, Plainfield, and Voluntown. Part of his land he settled on his children during his lifetime, and the remainder he bequeathed to his widow and sons, Richard and Henry in equal parts. The date of his death is not given, but his will was probated in New London, August 9, 1726. Elizabeth, widow and relict to Henry Stephens, late of Stonington, gave a deed of land to her son, Henryh, Ocober 8, 1736.

Notes for ELIZABETH GALLUP:
THE FAMILY OF ELIZABETH GALLUP
WIFE OF HENRY STEVENS OF STONINGTON

John Gallup came, to this country from the Parish of Mosturn, County Dorset, England. He sailed March 30, 1630, in the ship Mary and John, and arrived at Nantasket, now Hull, May 30, 1630. He was the son of John Gallup, who married --- Crabbe, and the grandson of Thomas and Agnes (Watkins) Gallup of North Bowood and Strode, whose decendants still own and occupy the Manor of Strode.

John Gallup, the immigrant, married Christobel, whose surname is not given. He settled in Dorchester, then Boston, and became a landholder, owning land in the town and an island of sixteen acres in Boston Bay which still bears his name. He also owned Mixes Mate, or Monument Island, as it is sometimes called, where he pastured sheep. He was a skillful mariner, well acquainted with the harbor around Boston. He piloted the Ship Griffin in September 1633, through a new-found passage, among her two hundred passengers being Reverand John Cotton, Reverand Thomas Hooker, Reverand Mr. Stone, and other fathers of New England.

The most notable adventure in the sturdy Captain's life was his encounter with a boat load of Indians, whom he captured and destroyed off Block Island with the aid of his two sons and a hired man. The Indians had murdered John Oldham, a man of ability, and they were having a hilarious time in his boat when they were over-taken by Captain Gallup. This has been called the first naval battle on the Atlantic coast, and it gave the Captain a Colonial and later a national reputation. It was one of the first skirmishes of the great Pequod War.

John Gallup died in Boston in 1649. An inventory of his estate was made December 26, 1649. His widow died July 27, 1655.

Children of John and Christobel Gallup:

John B. in England about 1615, m. Hannah Lake in 1643.
Samuel, b. in England, m. Mary Philips.
Nathaniel, b. in England; m. Margaret Everly.
Joan, b. in England; m. Thomas Joy.

John Gallup, son of the Immigrant, came to this country with his mother, two brothers, and sister, Joan in the ship Griffin, arriving in Boston, September 4, 1633. He married Hannah Lake, daughter of John and Margaret (Read/Reade), and niece of Elizabeth Read, wife of John Winthrop Jr., Governor of Connecticut. Hannah Lake came to this country with her mother in the ship Abigail, arriving October 6, 1635, after a passage of ten weeks.

John Gallup left Boston in 1640 and went to Taunton, then part of Plymouth Colony, where he remained until 1651. He then removed to New London, where he lived until 1654, when he went to what is now Stonington, then a part of New London, and settled upon a grant of land given to him by that town in 1650, in regognition of distinguished services of himself and his father in the Pequod War. He represented the town in the General Court in 1665 and 1667, and was an Indian interpreter.
When KingPhilip's War broke out New London County raised a company of seventy men under Captain John Mason of Norwich and Captain George Dennison of Stonington. Captain John Gallup joined them as the head of the Mohegans, a band of friendly Indians. These troops formed a union with those of other colonies and were engaged in the fearful Swamp Fight, December 19, 1675, at Narraganset, within the limits of South Kingston, Rhode Island. In storming the fort Captain GAllup led his men bravely forward and was one of the six captains who fell in the memorable fight. He was buried with his fallen comrades in one grave near the battle ground. A complete victory was gained over the savage foe, but with great loss of life on both sides.

The General Court afterward made several grants of land to his widow and children in consideration of the great services he had rendered and the loss his family had sustained by his death.

Will of John Gallup of Stonington, 1725

From "Genealogy of Gallup Family" By John D. Gallup, published 1893. None of the spelling has changed. (Note: John Gallup, son of John Gallup II and Hannah Lake Gallup).

WILL OF JOHN GALLUP OF STONINGTON

In the name of God, Amen; the eighth day of June, 1725. I, John Gallup, of Stonington, in the county of New London, in the Colony of Connecticut, in New England province, being sick and weak in body, but of Perfect mind and Memory, thanks be given to God therfore, Doe make and Ordaine this, my Last will and Testament. That is to say, first, I give and recomend my soul unto the hands of God that gave it, and my body I recomend to the Earth to be buried in Decent and Christian manner at the discretion of my Executors hereinafter named. And as touching such worldly Estate wherewith it hath pleased God to bless me with in this world, I doe give, devise and dispose of in the following manner and form.

Item- I give and bequeath unto my beloved son, John Gallup, the sum of five pounds curr't money and one hundred acres of land, viz, my part of the three hundred acres that was laid out to myself, brother Adam Gallup and brother William Gallup, near a place called Peaagwamsh River by virtue of a Grant from the General Court at Hartford to my Hon'rd father, Captain John Gallup, late of said Stonington, deceased. I having formerly given my said son, John Gallup, by deed of gift and other wise the full of his portion, as he is my eldest son.

Item- I give and bequeath to my Loving Son, Thomas Gallup, the sum of five pounds curr't money, I having formerly given him, my said son Thomas Gallup, by deed of gift and otherwise, the full of his portion.

Item- I give and bequeath to my Loving Son, Samuel Gallup, that lott of land in said Stonington, joyning on Mystick River, where my old house stood. Also, I give to my said son Samuel them three Divisions of Land which I had from

Plainfield Right now annexed to Voluntown, viz, the division which was my original right and of right which I bouth of John Fellowes, and that Right which I bought of Ephraim Kingsbury. Also my will is that my said son Samuel doe continue with me and my wife and take the care of us during the whole time of both our naturall lives; then he shall have my new dwelling house nd part of the land I now improve; that is to say, Sixty Rods wide, begining at the Line Division between the Williams and the Gallups. I say sixty rods wide the whole length of my land, it coming to him in consideration of his taking care of and providing well for me and my wife the time above [said]. Also, I give him all my husbandry utensils, and all stock of creatures of every sort, only to my said son Samuel to pay to my Loveing Daughter, Martha Gifford, the sum of forty pounds in stock at Inventory Price. I also give my said son Samuel one half of my meadow at Sixpenny Island, and one half of my right at Nowasonk, and half my right of commonage in the Town of Stonington.

Item- I give and bequeath unto my Loveing Son, Nath'll Gallup all ye Remainder of my land from the south bounds the whole length of my land where I now live, except what I have given to my said son Sam'll. Also, I give to my son Nath'll all my Voluntown Right, divided and undivided, within the Town of Voluntown, and half my meadow at Sixpenny Island and half my right at Nowasonk and half my right of commanage in the Town of Stonington, and all other my rights of land now or hereafter belonging to me within the Colony of Connecticut or elsewhere, which I have not disposed of. Also I give to my said son Nath'll, Eighteen Pounds money which is due to me from my brother, Ben Adam Gallup.

Item- I Give and Bequeath to my Loving Daughter, Martha Gifford, the Sum of forty Pounds, to be paid to her as before said exprest, I having formerly done for her as I was able.

Item- I Give and Bequeath unto my loving wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Gallup, all my household stuff, to be hers to use, give or dispose of as she shall see cause. Finally, I do hereby nominate, make and ordain my tow sons, Samuel Gallup and Nathaniel Gallup, to be my executors of this my last Will and Testament, and I do hereby disallow, revoak and disallow all other or former wills by me formerly made, ratifying and confirming this and no others to be my last will and testament. In witness thereof I have hereunto sett my hand and seal the day and year above written.

(Seal) John Gallup

The Gallup Family in America

Many compilations are found which provide an ancestry in England for John GALLUP of Boston, MA. However, such claims likely all have their roots in John D. Gallup's Genealogical History of the Gallup Family in the United States (1893), in which English pedigrees were quoted in support of the claim that John GALLUP of New England was son of John GALLUP and Mary CRABBE of Mosterne, Dorset, England.

Charles Wilson Allen obtained a copy of the subject pedigree and found it had been misquoted, publishing his "Gallop Genealogy: Corrections" in Apr. 1963 [NEHGR 114:151-52] and concluding that the claimed Gallup ancestry in England "is not substantiated by this or any other document known to me."

The Gallup ancestry search continues, with Gerald James Parsons' "John Gallop/Gollop of Bridport, Dorchestershire, England, and Boston, Massachusetts" [TAG 68:1 (Jan. 1993), pp. 11-13] detailing the available records, including the marriage of John GALLUP and Christabell BRUCHETT and the baptism of their seven children at St. Mary's Church, Bridport, Dorchestershire, England. Parsons also concluded that "no other records needed to determine John Gallop's parentage and/or his relationship to the other Gollops in Bridport were located."

Available material concerning John GALLOP is reviewed in The Great Migration Begins, Volume II, by Robert Charles Anderson (1995), pp. 725-28, and the Bridport records are included in the article on John GALLOP. In commenting on another publication, the author states that "the section on English ancestry has been superseded and should be ignored." All that is known of the immigrant's birth is that he was born "By about 1593 based on date of marriage."

John and Christobel (Brushett) Gallup

John GALLUP - b. about 1593, England; d. Jan. 11, 1649/50, Boston, Suffolk Co., MA. John's parentage has not been determined. He was admitted to the Boston church on Jan. 5, 1633/4, and became freeman Apr. 1, 1634 as third in a group of six Dorchester men, but there is no evidence he lived there. His will, dated Dec. 20, 1649 and proved Feb. 9, 1649/50, and the inventory taken Feb. 26, 1649/50 includes properties indicating his occupation of fisherman and mariner. His real estate included "The Island, Called by ye name of Gallupe's Island, Containeinge about 16 acres." Capt. GALLOP piloted arriving ships into Boston Harbor, and in the coastal trade between CT and ME. Married Jan. 19, 1617/8, St. Mary's Church, Bridport, Dorset, England.

Christobel BRUSHETT - b. 1592, Dorset, England; d. Sep. 27, 1655; Boston, Suffolk Co., MA. She did not arrive in America with her husband, possibly deciding to delay the journey due to either the young age or soon arrival of her son John, the Younger. It may have taken the encouragement of Rev. John WHITE to have her make the crossing with her four surviving children. Gov. John WINTHROP had written to Rev. WHITE on Jul. 4, 1632: "I have much difficulty to keep John Galloppe here by reason his wife will not come. I marvel at the woman's weakness that she will live miserably with her children there, when she might live comfortably here with her husband. I pray persuade and further her coming by all means: if she will come let her have the remainder of his wages, if not, let it be bestowed to bring over his children, for so he desires: it would be above £40 loss to him to come for her." Christobel was admitted to the Boston Church Jun. 22, 1634. Her will, dated Jul. 24, 1655 and proved

Oct. 31, 1655, names her three sons and daughter Joane Joy. The name of her father is uncertain, since it has been given as both Edmund and John.

He was murdered by the Indians while bear hunting near the Quinebaug River. Rudge Richard A. Wheeler says in his HISTORY OF STONINGTON: "...he met a squad of Indians, who were hunting in the same region who ordered him to clear out and leave the game to them, as they were the original owners of it--if he did not--they would kill and scalp him on the spot. He bid defiance to their threats, when they attacked him with their tomahawks and scalping knives. He defended himself as best he could, and a terrible struggle ensued which resulted in his death, and that of five of the Indians."

This family name, written Vander Veer ("From the Ferry"), was borne by one of the earliest Dutch settlers of Long Island, New York, Cornelise Janse Vander Veer was one of the founders of the town of Flatbush, having emigrated from Alkmaar, Holland, in the "Otter," and landed at Flatbush, February, 1659; was entered on the ship list as a farmer, and a facsimile of his signature shows that he spelled his name Vander Veer. Among his descendants there is much diversity in regard to spelling their surname. A great-grandson of Cornelise Janse in one bond dated May 29, 1765, spelled it as follows: Vander Veer, V. D. Veer, Van Derveer, Van Der Veer. It would seem that over a century ago members of this Dutch family were somewhat undecided at to the correct spelling of their surname. Sons of the founders of this family settled in the Raritan Valley of New Jersey, in Monmouth county, and after the revolution ascended the Hudson and Mohawk rivers to Montgomery county, New York, always with unerring instinct settling upon rich and fertile land. They furnished officers and soldiers for the revolution. The farms of two of the allied families formed a portion of the battle field of Monmouth — that of Albert Couwenhoven (Conover), and on which was located the famous spring around which the soldiers lay thick, dying from freely drinking the cold water; among the bodies of the dead the women and children of the family found their way in order to carry water to the helpless, while the men did their part in the actual combat.

In the war of 1812-14 they participated, as well as in the war with Mexico, and the great civil war, where one of this family gallantly led his men, though severely wounded, refusing to yield until the battle was over, when soon after, with a soldier's fortitude, he went to his long rest. One of the Albany family was in the Spanish-American war, which completes a remarkable military record. The ancestry of the Albany line entitles them to membership in all patriotic orders of the United States based on military or colonial forbears. While this is true, the descendants of the first Vander Veer have earned recognition for themselves, and their names adorn the rosters of some of our most noted institutions and organizations, placed there through individual achievement. From the earliest days of American history their pathway may be traced by their deeds as soldiers, pioneer farmers, merchants, manufacturers and professional men. In the professions the name is an eminent one, not only in theology, but ever best as well in the divine art of healing, where it is pre-eminent.

Through intermarriage, the descendants of Cornelise Janse Vander Veer are connected with a great many of the earlier Dutch settlers in eastern New Jersey and the Hudson and Mohawk Valleys of New York state. By a marriage of a Vander Veer with a Sarah Martin the family connects with Philip Schuyler and Margarita Van Slichtenhorst through their son, Colonel Philip (Quidor) and second wife, Maria Van Rensselaer, also Surgeon and Mayor Abram Staats, the first physician in the colony of Rensselaerwyck. By the marriage of a later Vander Veer with Margaret E. Snow, descent is traced to Isaac Allerton, of England, who came over in the "Mayflower" and was the fifth son to sign "the immortal compact."

(I) Cornelise Janse Vander Veer, of Holland, came of a family of considerable distinction, dating back to an early period. The reading of the family coat-of-arms indicates this. The foil denotes that some action in defense of the Trinity has been performed by him to whom the arms were first granted. The cap of dignity in crest denotes the family to have been of noble origin. The wolf's head in heraldry denotes courage and determination while the ragged edge of head indicates some great feat of valor had been performed. Motto: Aut in veniam, out faciam (Whatever we attempt, we do). Several tales are told among the descendants of Cornelise Janse Vander Veer regarding his coming to this country, the most frequent one being that two brothers sailed for America, became shipwrecked and were picked up by a Spanish vessel, held for ransom, and eventually returned to Holland, one to remain, while Cornelise Janse later came to the new world. Landing in Flatbush, February, 1659, from ship "Otter," he bought a farm in 1678-79, February 24, from Jan Janse Fry for 2600 gulden, in Flatbush, lying south of Fry's farm, from which it is evident he was a resident at this date. The purchaser's farm referred to in the above description was probably a tract of 2600 morgans in Flatbush, patented March 12, 1661, by Governor Stuyvesant to Cornelise Janse, lying on the north side of the land of Jan Swediker. His name is on the patent of Flatbush, 1685, and his official papers bear date of 1678-80.

About 1672, Cornelise Janse Vander Veer married Tyntje, daughter of Gillis de Mandeville and Elsjie Hendricks. An inscription on a plate over the gate at the entrance of Rowen, Normandy, France, from whence the de Mandevilles originally came, shows that they had achieved great distinction in the early history of that ancient city. Cornelise Janse and Tyntje Gillis (De Mandeville) Vander Veer had children. In the records of these children all have suffix Cornelissen, meaning son or daughter of Cornelise. Children:

1. Cornelise Cornelissen, baptized about 1677; married Jannetje Van Nostrand.
2. Neeltje Cornelissen, married, August 13, 1685, first wife of Daniel Polhemus.
3. Jan Cornelissen, married, January 6, 1695, Fennuetje Bergen.
4. Dominicus Cornelissen, see forward.
5. Maria Cornelissen, baptized July 30, 1682.
6. Hendrickje Cornelissen, baptized August 17, 1684; married Johannes Wyck (or Wyckoff).

7. Michael Cornelissen, married Belitje ————.

8. Jacoba Cornelissen, baptized April 29, 1686; married Jan Willemse Van Couwenhoven.

9. Pieter Cornelissen, baptized April 29, 1686.

10. Jacobus Cornelissen, baptized October 29, 1686; married Catherine ————.

(II) Dominicus Cornelissen, third son of Cornelise Janse Vander Veer, was baptized November 16, 1679, in Flatbush, Long Island. His name appears in the Flatbush records in 1704-27-40 in relation to salt meadows and church funds in said town. In 1736 he was sheriff of Kings county. Late in the seventeenth and early in the eighteenth centuries the Dutch had taken all of the agricultural lands on the west end of Long Island, consequently many of the second generation of this Holland stock were forced to seek tillable acres in East Jersey. A few years after 1746 the Axtell patent in New Jersey was sold to Long Island men, the inhabitants of the Raritan Valley and of the vicinity of Flatbush being at this time in close alliance. About 1750, Dominicus Vander Veer (as he signed his name) was persuaded to locate on his patent along the Raritan river. He married (first) Jannetje ————; one son, Cornelise, born 1700, of Shrewsbury, New Jersey; married (first) Jannetje Wyckoff; (second) Marytje Smock. Dominicus Vander Veer married (second, license dated January 28, 1703), Maria Margaretta Van Orteck. Children:

1. Tunis, see forward.

2. Jannetje, baptized June 1, 1709.

3. Jacobus, of the Raritan, baptized December 10, 1721; married, May 25, 1745, Fannetje Strycker.

4. Dominicus, baptized November 3, 1723; married, July 3, 1748, Elizabeth Lequeer.

5. Catlyntje, baptized July 25, 1725; married Jacobus Lefferts.

6. Neeltje, baptized July, 1727; married, July 9, 1749, first wife of Peter Lott, of Long Island.

7. Jeromus or Jeremias, of Long Island, baptized March 30, 1729; married Elizabeth Ditmas.

8. Arntje, baptized October 17, 1731; married Cornelise Van Duyn.

9. Jan, baptized August 19, 1733.

10. Cornelia.

11. Hendrick, of Monmouth county, New Jersey; married Neeltje Van Cleef.

(III) Tunis, son of Dominicus Cornelissen Vander Veer, was born about 1704, on Long Island, and later was a resident of Freehold, New Jersey. He married, about 1723, Alchie, daughter of Gerret Roelofse Schenck and wife Neeltje Coertsen Van Voorhees. Most of the Vander Veers living in and about Monmouth county are the descendants of this couple, among them the late Vice-President Garret A. Hobart, on his mother's side. The farm of Tunis Vander Veer formed a portion of the battlefield of Monmouth. All the buildings were burned by the British, and on the return of the family, which had taken refuge in the left wing of Washington's army, only a cat and pair of fowls could be found. On the roster of the New

7. Melchert Cornelissen, married Belgie ———

8. Jacobus Cornelissen, baptized April 29, 1686; married Jan Willemse Van Cooneinhoven.

9. Peter Cornelissen, baptized April 20, 1686.

10. Jacobus Cornelissen, baptized October 29, 1690; married Catherine ———

(II) Dominicus Cornelissen, third son of Cornelius Janse Vander Veer, was baptized November 16, 1679, in Flatbush, Long Island. His name appears in the Flatbush records in 1704-27-40 in relation to salt meadows and church funds in said town. In 1710 he was sheriff of Kings county. Late in the seventeenth and early in the eighteenth centuries the Dutch had taken all of the agricultural lands on the west end of Long Island, consequently many of the second generation of this Holland stock were forced to seek tillable acres in East Jersey. A few years after 1740 the Axtell patent in New Jersey was sold to Long Island men, the inhabitants of the Raritan Valley and of the vicinity of Flatbush being at this time in close alliance. About 1750, Dominicus Vander Veer (as he signed his name) was persuaded to locate on his patent along the Raritan river. He married (first) Jemmetje ———, one son, Cornelius, born 1700, of Somerville, New Jersey; married (first) Jemmetje Wyckoff (second) Marytje Smock. Dominicus Vander Veer married (second, license dated January 28, 1702), Magna Margaretta Van Dreck. Children:

1. Tunis, see forward

2. Jemmetje, baptized June 1, 1709.

3. Jacobus, of the Raritan, baptized December 10, 1727; married, May 25, 1743, Femmetje Schuyler.

4. Dominicus, baptized November 3, 1723; married, July 3, 1748, Elizabeth Lagerer.

5. Catlyntje, baptized July 25, 1725; married Jacobus Lefferts.

6. Neeltje, baptized July, 1727; married, July 9, 1749, first wife of Peter Lott, of Long Island.

7. Jeremias or Jeremias, of Long Island, baptized March 30, 1729; married Elizabeth Dimmis.

8. Annetje, baptized October 17, 1731; married Cornelius Van Duyn.

9. Jan, baptized August 19, 1733.

10. Cornelia

11. Hendrick, of Monmouth county, New Jersey; married Neeltje Van Cleef.

2(III) Tunis, son of Dominicus Cornelissen Vander Veer, was born about 1704, on Long Island, and later was a resident of Freehold, New Jersey. He married, about 1723, Alotje, daughter of Garret Roelofse Schenck and wife Neeltje Coertsen Van Voorhees. Most of the Vander Veers living in and about Monmouth county are the descendants of this couple, among them the late Vice-President Garret A. Hobart, on his mother's side. The farm of Tunis Vander Veer formed a portion of the battlefield of Monmouth. All the buildings were burned by the British, and on the return of the family, which had taken refuge in the left wing of Washington's army, only a cat and pair of fowls could be found. On the roster of the New Jersey revolutionary troops are not to be found the names of Tunis and his sons, save one, his namesake, who was later taken prisoner at Sandy Hook and detained in the old "Sugar House" eighteen months. Tunis, the father, with his six sons and a grandson (Jacob's son Tunis) all took part that day, and the father rode as aide-de-camp for Washington; his son Garret was a prisoner for some time; his wife communicated with him by concealing letters in loaves of bread. Monmouth county suffered severely from the depredations of the British army, particularly in and about Freehold, where they exceeded all the others through the state. Ferocious and lawless as the British soldiers were, they were outdone by the refugees who took up arms against friends and former neighbors. Between them occurred scenes of ferocity and incidents of individual daring to fill a volume of horrors. In order to protect their wives and daughters, and save their property from these awful dangers, the men of determination and influence drew up articles of agreement to suppress the raiders. The original is to be found in the secretary of state's office at Trenton, and attached to it will be found the names of Tunis Vander Veer and his sons. Children of Tunis and Alchie (Schenck) Vander Veer:

1. John, of Marlboro, New Jersey, born November 8, 1724.
2. Phebe, married John N. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, New Jersey.
3. Garret (see sketch).
4. Nelly, baptized January 2, 1734; married (first) Hendrick Voorhees.
5. Jacob, see forward.
6. Tunis, baptized April 19, 1739; married (first) Jane Hance; (second), ————.
7. Cornelise, of Holmdel, New Jersey, baptized May 24, 1741; married (first) 1761, Jannetje Williams; (second) 1764, Maria Conover.
8. Alchie, baptized 1745; married James Connelton.
9. David, baptized September 25, 1748; married, February 28, 1765, Catherine Conover.

(IV) Jacob, son of Tunis Vander Veer, born May 5, 1736, died July 24, 1806. He married (first) October, 1759; Alchie Wyckoff, born July 21, 1736, daughter of Gerret Gerretse Wyckoff and Alchie Gerretse. Married (second) (supposed) Anna Clayton; she married after his death at Glen, New York, October 17, 1812, Tivis Follic (Matthias Van Valkenburgh). Jacob Vander Veer and his first wife, Alchie (Wyckoff) Vander Veer, came from along the Raritan river, New Jersey, into the Mohawk Valley, and located in Florida, Montgomery county, a few miles south of Amsterdam, New York. Jacob was one of many who came with Washington at the time (1780) the troops came to subdue the Indian depredations. Finding the valley so rich and beautiful a country, he purchased a farm containing buildings and improvements from John Watts, the father-in-law of Sir John Johnson. He remained a year, sowed and reaped a crop of wheat, which he sold for one dollar per bushel, and thus paid off his indebtedness of $1100. He then returned to his family in New Jersey, who ere long came with him to the new home. Not long after her coming to this home, his wife died, and is buried on the farm beside Jacob. The farm was left to his youngest son Asher, with the reputation of being the best cultivated and best equipped buildings in the township. Children of first wife:

1. Nelly, baptized August 3, 1760; married ———— Warner.
2. Tunis, baptized May 29, 1762, (was a bachelor).

3. Catherine, baptized August 3, 1763; married Cobis, or James Sutfan, of Cranberry Creek, New Jersey.
4. Garret, see forward.
5. Phebe, baptized May 17, 1767, died young.
6. John, married ————.
7. Samuel, married Betsey Denison.
8. Alchie, married Timothy Gordan.
9. Anna, born 1779; married William Stillwell.

Children of second wife:

1. Thomas, born 1783, drowned July 19, 1800.
2. Joseph, born 1784, accidentally killed December 3, 1794.
3. Asher, born May 17, 1787, married Asenath Elliot.
4. Sally, married, February 25, 1813 (first wife) Elisha Cady.
5. Polly, married, December 30, 1810; (supposed) Cornelise Mount.

(V) Garret, son of Jacob Vander Veer, was born July 4, 1765. He came with his parents from New Jersey into the Mohawk Valley. At the time of their coming there was a general exodus from this state westward. Albert Couwenhoven and his wife Patience located near Garret's new home. They had occupied in New Jersey the adjoining farm to his grandfather, Tunis Vander Veer. They brought with them a daughter Rachel, born April 18, 1768. She, as a child of ten years, helped to carry water on that terrible day in June, 1778, from the spring on her father's farm. There are living in the present generation (1910) those who have heard from her lips the story of that day. The night before the battle her father's house was used as a shelter for the women and children of the neighborhood. She told with pride of the good night visit made by Washington accompanied by Lafayette. The former shook hands with them, followed by a kiss from Lafayette, and then the two sought their night's rest under a nearby tree. The following day she witnessed the meeting between General Washington and General Lee, and says: "What General Washington said to General Lee was not expressed in very nice language." Time passed, and on February 29, 1788, in her father's home at Glen, she married Garret Vander Veer. For a few years they lived on and worked the farm of a cousin (or as then commonly called Uncle Peter Couwenhoven) in the town of Florida; in 1801 they took up new land in the town of Root; here Garret died, April 19, 1813, leaving his wife with nine sons and three daughters to rear. Children:

1. Alchie, born July 29, 1789; married Cornelise Fero.
2. Albert, born April 18, 1791; married Margaret Fero.
3. Jacob, born August 1, 1793; married Martha Willett.
4. Peter, born December 18, 1796; married Jane Walker.
5. John G., born May 10, 1798; married Ann Voorhees.
6. Thomas, born October 14, 1800, died young.
7. Thomas and

1. Catherine, baptized August 3, 1794; married Cobie or James Sutton of Cranberry Creek, New Jersey
4. Garret, see forward.
5. Phebe, baptized May 12, 1797; died young
6. John, married _____
7. Samuel, married Betsey Denison.
8. Aldbie, married Timothy Gordan
9. Anna, born 1779; married William Stillwell.

Children of second wife:

1. Thomas, born 1781; drowned July 10, 1800.
2. Joseph, born 1784; accidentally killed December 3, 1794
3. Asher, born May 17, 1787; married Asenath Elliot.
4. Sally, married February 25, 1813 (first wife) Elisha Cady.
5. Polly, married December 30, 1810; (supposed) Cornelius Mount.

11. Katherine, born June 4, 1810, died young.

12. Garret, born May 9, 1813; married Mary Allen.

The descendants in Montgomery county are numerous, filling all stations in life, but usually are farmers of substance and prominence.

(VI) Abraham Harris, eighth son of Garret and Rachel (Couwenhoven) Vander Veer, was born in the town of Root, Montgomery county, New York, June 18, 1804, died August 19, 1888. He was one of the founders of the village of Leatherville (Rural Grove), where in partnership with Henry Stowitts he established and operated a large tannery. He was reared in the Dutch church, but his wife was a member of the Christian church. He married, September 27, 1826, Sarah Martin, daughter of Barent P. Martin and first wife, Hester McGraw, of Fort Hunter. Sarah Martin was of an early English Martin family who first located in New Hampshire; later a branch settled in the Piscataway Valley, New Jersey, and at Albany and Fort Hunter. Children:

1. Rachel, born September 27, 1827, died young.

2. Esther, born January 14, 1830, died May 30, 1909; married, June 10, 1852, John Craig; children:

    1. Janet, died young;

    2. Ada, married William J. Walker, five children;

    3. Marcia, died October 4, 1899, married Martin Van Buren, two sons;

    4. Stuart, died young

    5. Marion Mead;

    6. Margaret, died November 1, 1895; married Robert P. Thorn, Jr., three sons.

3. Patience, born March 17, 1832, died March 7, 1902; married, June 20, 1855, Charles W. Marselius; children:

    1. Willard Charles, M.D., died December 24, 1893, married Gertrude Wheeler;

    2. Sarah, married (first) Dr. Frank O. Cornell; (second) Rev. Enoch Powell; two sons;

    3. Esther, married Franklin Potter Toll; two children;

    4. Marcia, died May 13, 1901; married George H. Brewster; two sons.

4. Martin, born May 6, 1834; married, February 1, 1860, Katherine L. Potter; children:

    1. Katherine Potter;

    2. Bradford Martin, died March 14, 1895;

3. Rollin Garret, died young;
4. Marcia Moulton.

5. Garrett, born August 28, 1836, died February 24, 1864; married, December 18, 1861, Margaret Kline; child, John Craig, died young. Garrett was made captain of Company A, One Hundred and Fifteenth Regiment New York Volunteers. At the battle of Olustee, Florida, he was four times severely wounded, but refused to leave the field until the fight was ended; his men, in relays of four, carried him on a stretcher through the woods and swamps a distance of nineteen miles to Barbers; he then was placed in an open car, crowded with suffering men, rode all day Sunday and until after midnight on this train, which at times was drawn by mules. At Jacksonville he was placed on a hospital boat and carried to Beaufort, South Carolina, where he died shortly after his arrival and was buried there, attended to his grave by many of the wounded members of his regiment and his brethren of the Masonic fraternity. Later his remains were brought to Fultonville, New York. Post Vander Veer, Grand Army of the Republic, at Fonda, New York, is named in his honor; at the time of his death he had been promoted to lieutenant-colonel and his commission was even then in transit. General Seymour caused a redoubt in the fortifications at Jacksonville to be named Vander Veer in honor of his memory, and noticed his gallantry in general orders.

6. Jane Ann, born November 1, 1838, died May 18, 1910; married (first) Aaron Lillenback; (second) Charles E. Shires; children of first marriage:

1. Abraham H., died young;
2. Albert V., married Ella A. Mosher; eight children;
3. Garret V., married Adele L. Whitaker;
4. Mary L., died young;
5. Lucy Kate;
6. Martin Aaron, died young.

7. Albert, see forward.
8. Putnam Enders, died young.
9. Sarah E. F., died young.
10. William Putnam Enders, born March 1, 1851.

(VII) Albert, seventh child and third son of Abraham Harris and Sarah (Martin) Vander Veer, was born in Root, Montgomery county, New York, July 10, 1841. His early education was acquired in the public schools of Canajoharie, Union Free School, Palatine, and in Canajoharie Academy. At the age of eighteen and nineteen he studied medicine under the direction of Dr. Simeon Snow (see forward), of Currytown, New York, and later was a student under Dr. John Swinburne, a physician and surgeon of renown in Albany, afterward attaining a national reputation. In 1861 he attended a full course of lectures at Albany Medical College, and in 1862 a second course at the National Medical College, medical department, Columbian University, now the George Washington University, from which he was graduated December 23, 1862. In May, 1862, he enlisted in the United States Medical Corps, one of the original One Hundred Medical Cadets" called to service by the surgeon-general of the United States army, they having studied medicine two years and attended one full course of lectures and passing a satisfactory examination, to act as internes in the military hospitals. (VII) Albert, seventh child and third son of Abraham Harris and Sarah (Marin) Vander Veer, was born in Root, Montgomery county, New York, July 10, 1841. His early education was acquired in the public schools of Canajoharie, Union Free School, Palatine, and in Canajoharie Academy. At the age of eighteen and nineteen he studied medicine under the direction of Dr. Simeon Snow (see forward), of Canytown, New York, and later was a student under Dr. John Swinburne, a physician and surgeon of renown in Albany, afterward attaining a national reputation. In 1861 he attended a full course of lectures at Albany Medical College, and in 1862 a second course at the National Medical College, medical department, Columbian University, now the George Washington University, from which he was graduated December 23, 1862. In May, 1862, he enlisted in the United States Medical Corps, one of the original One Hundred Medical Cadets" called to service by the surgeon-general of the United States army, they having studied medicine two years and attended one full course of lectures and passing a satisfactory examination, to act as interns in the military hospitals. After taking the examination he was assigned to Columbia College Hospital, and was soon informed by Dr. Crosby, surgeon-in-charge, that if they (he and two or three other cadets) would arise early and attend to all their dressings they could have from 2 to 8 in which to attend lectures, graduate, and get their diplomas. After passing a New York state examination he was commissioned in December, 1862, assistant surgeon of the Sixty-sixth Regiment New York Volunteers, and ordered to join his regiment at Falmouth, Virginia. Soon after he was detailed as assistant to one of the chief operators at brigade hospital, Third Brigade, First Division, Second Army Corps, Army of the Potomac. In June, 1864, on the recommendation of every officer in the regiment, he was appointed by Surgeon-General Quackenbush and Governor Seymour, of New York, surgeon in charge of the regiment, with the rank of major. Soon after he was appointed one of the surgeons of the First Division hospital, Second Army Corps, and placed in charge of an operating table. Here he gained his first actual experience in operative surgery that was henceforth to be his specialty. He was with his regiment in all their battles after the first Fredericksburg except Ream's Station, when ill, up to the surrender at Appomattox. At that historic event he had the pleasure of witnessing the meeting between General Grant and General Lee. He was mustered out of the service in September, 1865.

After attending a full course of lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, he returned to Albany, New York, in May, 1866, and entered upon the practice of his profession, where, after forty-three years of successful practice, he is now (1909) still to be found, full of years and professional honors, associated with his two sons, who are also able practitioners. His life has been one of great activity as a professional man and as a citizen. He is honored at home and abroad for his knowledge and experience in medicine and surgery, his services to the cause of education, and his high character as a man. Skillful and useful as he is in private practice, hospital and consultation, his literary and platform ability has enabled him to convey to his brethren of the profession in a series of addresses and printed articles his experiences, theories and conclusions, thereby increasing a thousand fold his usefulness. To recite his membership would be to call the roll of the leading medical and surgical societies of the world. He has served as member and president of the Albany County Medical Society, the Medical Society of the State of New York, the American Association of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, and is a member of the American Medical Association. He was a delegate to the International Medical Congress, held at Copenhagen in 1884, and was elected honorary president of the Fifteenth International Medical Congress held at Lisbon, Portugal, in 1906, having been appointed one of the commissioners from the United States government. In July, 1905, he was elected president of the American Surgical Association, an honor that comes to few men, having been a fellow since 1882, a member of the nominating committee, of the council, and twice president. In 1909 he was appointed by the United States government delegate to the International Medical Congress meeting at Budapest, Austria, but was unable to attend owing to the illness of his wife. He is the author of Cleft Palate and Hair Lip; Wood's Reference Hand Book of Medical Science; "History of General Surgery" in Encyclopedia Americana; "Injuries and Diseases of Abdomen" in International Encyclopedia of Surgery, and numerous articles in the leading medical journals at home and abroad, that show how full and complete is his mastery of whatever subject he discusses. In 1867 he was attending surgeon to the Albany Hospital Dispensary as assistant to Dr. Alden March; 1869, attending surgeon (with exception 1874-75, while abroad studying) until 1904, when appointed surgeon-in-chief; 1873 to 1903, attending surgeon St. Peter's Hospital; 1898 to date, attending surgeon South End Dispensary; consulting surgeon New York State Hospital for Crippled and Ruptured Children, West Haverstraw, New York; consulting surgeon Benedictine Hospital, Kingston, New York; consulting surgeon Champlain Valley Hospital, Plattsburg, New York. He has always manifested the deepest interest in the Albany Medical College, where he listened to his first course of medical lectures. He has filled the following important chairs in that institution: 1869-74, chair of general and special anatomy; 1875-82, chair of didactic, abdominal and clinical surgery; 1882 to date, chair of surgery; dean from 1896 to 1904. Dr. Vander Veer applied in Albany the first plaster paris jacket for curvature of the spine; performed the first Bigelow's operation for litholapaxy; first Kernochan's operation for removal of infra orbital nerve and Meckel's ganglia, reporting a number of cases. He has always led in the use and introduction of new methods and operations, if they possessed value. Always progressive, now nearing his fiftieth year in medicine, his services as a consulting physician and surgeon are in constant demand and gladly given.

Outside his profession, the career of Dr. Vander Veer has been a busy and interesting one. In 1895 he was elected a regent of the University of the State of New York, serving faithfully for six years; then by act of legislature the board was changed, he drawing the shortest period of one year; re-elected a third time for a full term, the first regent to be elected three times by the legislature. He was a trustee of the National Savings Bank many years; resigning January 1, 1910; trustee of Albany Cemetery Association, and president of the Holland Society of New York. While vice-president of the latter society he, with other members of Albany, entertained the officers of the "Van Speyk" when visiting this country, receiving from the Queen of Holland as an appreciation the order and decoration of Oranje Nassau. He is a life member of the New York Historical Society. Through his own military service as an officer in the civil war he is a companion of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion and Grand Army of the Republic. He is a member of Philip Livingston Chapter, Sons of the Revolution, the Albany Institute and Historical and Art Society, and of Albany social clubs — Fort Orange and University. In his nearly fifty years of professional life Dr. Vander Veer has received many evidences of the esteem in which he is held by his fellows. Albany Medical College conferred an honorary degree of M.D.; Williams and Hamilton College that of A.M. (1882); Union College (now University) Ph.D. (1883); Columbian University (now George Washington University, Washington, D.C.) in 1904 conferred LL.D., while honorary memberships in societies abroad and at home have been freely bestowed. In many of these he has been active and served as president. In Albany, where he has lived so long, he has ever taken an earnest interest in all that pertains to the public good; served for many years on the city board of health and was president of the board of special water commissioners. He is a Republican in politics. For more than forty years he has been a member of the First Presbyterian Church and is now an elder.

He married, June 5, 1867, Margaret E., daughter of his friend and preceptor, Dr. Simeon Snow (see forward). Children, all born in Albany, New York;

1. Charles Anson, March 30, 1868, died December 30, 1883;
2. Margaret Snow, December 29, 1869, died May 13, 1873;
3. Edgar Albert,
4. James Newell, and
5. Albert Jr., of whom further;
6. Garrett, born May 3, 1885, died August 27, 1900.

(VIII) Edgar Albert, son of Dr. Albert and Margaret E. (Snow) Vander Veer, was born September 29, 1873. He was educated at the Albany Academy; studied one year at Union College; then entered Yale University, where he was graduated with the class of 1895, receiving the degree of Ph.B. He studied medicine with his father and entered the Albany Medical College, graduating in class of 1898 as M.D. He was assistant surgeon, United States army, stationed at Fort McPherson, Georgia, during the Spanish-American war. After a year spent abroad he began the practice of his profession in Albany in association with his father. He is a member of the Albany County Medical Society, Medical Society State of New York, and the American Medical Association. He is attending surgeon in the Albany Hospital; has practiced clinical surgery in the Albany Medical College, and has a large private practice. He is a member of the Loyal Legion; the Holland Society of New York; the Society of Colonial Wars, gaining admission to the latter through the original certificate issued to Captain Roelof Martense Schenck (in New York State archives), said to have been the first military commission issued in Flatbush, Long Island; Philip Livingston Chapter, Sons of the Revolution, and Society of Mayflower Descendants. He married, June 5, 1900, Harriett, twin daughter of Benjamin W. Wooster and his second wife, Catherine Wooster; children:

1. Grace, born May 11, 1901;
2. Albert, August 10, 1902;
3. Edgar Albert Jr., June 15, 1906.

(VIII) James Newell, son of Dr. Albert and Margaret E. (Snow) Vander Veer, was born December 12, 1877. He is a graduate of the Albany Academy; of Union University, A.B., class of 1899; of Albany Medical College, M.D., 1903; Union, conferred in course, 1903, the degree of A.M. He began the practice of medicine in Albany in association with his father and is in active practice. He is lecturer on surgical technic, and instructor in genito-urinary surgery, Albany Medical College. He is chief of surgical staff of the Albany Hospital, attending surgeon at the South End Dispensary and Home of the Friendless, and consulting surgeon of The House of the Good Shepherd. He is a member of the American Medical Association, Albany County Medical Society, Medical Society of State of New York, American Academy of Medical Science, and a life member of the Anglo-American Medical Association of Berlin, Germany. In 1904 and again in 1905-06, Dr. Vander Veer was abroad, doing post-graduate work in Germany and France. He is assistant surgeon of the Tenth Regiment, New York National Guard, Medical Corps, with rank of lieutenant. He was major of the cadet battalion of the Albany Academy, 1894-95. His clubs are the Clinical, University and Fort Orange of Albany, and the Alpha Delta Phi Club of New York. Through maternal ancestors he is a member of the Society of Mayflower Descendants, and Sons of the Revolution, and through both lines he enters the Holland Society of New York. His fraternities are Alpha Delta Phi and Nu Signa Nu. He married, December 3, 1908, Ada, daughter of Thomas and Cornelia (Quadland) Holt; has one son, Adrian Holt, born November 4, 1909.

(VIII) Albert, son of Dr. Albert and Margaret E. (Snow) Vander Veer, was born November 28, 1879. He is a graduate of the Albany Academy, and Yale University, A.B., class of 1900. He passed a year in the study of medicine at Albany Medical College, then entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, where he was graduated M.D., class of 1904. He is in active practice in New York City; visiting physician, of Red Cross Hospital; assistant attending physician at Hospital for the Ruptured and Crippled; assistant physician of New York Dispensary; assistant physician of out-patient department of St. Luke's Hospital; clinical assistant of Vanderbilt Clinic; member of Alumni Association of Sloane Maternity and of Roosevelt hospitals; founder of the University Club, Albany; member of Yale Club of New York, Holland Society of New York, Albany Society of New York, Quiz Club, Omega Club, Alpha Delta Phi, and the City, State and National Medical associations. He is unmarried.

(The Snow Line)

This is an ancient New England family, to be found from the earliest days figuring prominently in the annals of Massachusetts. The American ancestor and first emigrant, William Snow, born in England, 1624, came to America in 1637, settled at Duxbury, Massachusetts, afterward was of Bridgewater, Massachusetts. He married Rebecca, daughter of Peter Brown who came in the "Mayflower."

(II) William (2), son of William (1) and Rebecca (Brown) Snow, was born in Bridgewater, Massachusetts, where he married, reared a family and died; his wife was Naomi Whitman.

(III) Eleazer, son of William (2) and Naomi (Whitman) Snow, was also of Bridgewater, Massachusetts. He married, in 1728, Mercy King.

(IV) Reuben, son of Eleazer and Mercy (King) Snow, was born in Bridgewater, Massachusetts, but removed to Easton, Massachusetts. He married Hannah Willis, a descendant in the sixth generation from Isaac Allerton, a "Mayflower" passenger, and the fifth signer of the "Compact."

(V) Simeon, son of Reuben and Hannah (Willis) Snow, was a merchant of Boston in 1812, afterward a manufacturer of nails and hardware. He married Polly Phillips.

(VI) Dr. Simeon (2), son of Simeon (1) and Polly (Phillips) Snow, was born in Mansfield, Massachusetts, February 17, 1803, died in Currytown, Montgomery county, New York, September 20, 1865. His early life was spent on the farm. He received a thorough academic education, becoming unusually proficient in Latin and developing great interest and understanding of chemistry. He entered the medical school of William [Williams?] College, graduating in 1828. He settled in the town of Root, Montgomery county, New York, in the village of Currytown, where he had a large and successful practice. He was skilled in his profession, and his services were greatly sought after. He was a Democrat in politics and represented Montgomery county in the state senate, 1852-53. He married Margaret Dievendorf, born in Currytown, January 10, 1811, died in Albany, New York, April 19, 1884, daughter of Jacob Dievendorf, a pioneer settler of the county, who had the unusual experience not only of being scalped by the Indians but of surviving the operation and living to the age of eighty-four (see Simms' Border Wars, and History of Montgomery and Fulton Counties). Children:

1. Jacob Dievendorf, married Margaret Failing;
2. Elizabeth, married Seth Ramsey, M.D.;
3. Norman Leslie, married Elizabeth Smith;
4. William Russell, died in childhood;
5. Horatio Nelson, unmarried;

6. Charles Sidney, married Janet Lipe;
7. Margaret, see forward;
8. George Anson, married Fanny Dievendorf.

(VII) Margaret, daughter of Dr. Simeon (2) and Margaret (Dievendorf) Snow, was born in Currytown, Montgomery county, New York, September 20, 1845. She married, June 5, 1867, Dr. Albert Vander Veer (see Vander Veer VII). The young couple began life together in Albany, where for nearly half a century they have lived. She is a member of the First Presbyterian Church, as are her husband and three surviving sons, (1909), all physicians of high repute. She is a member of the Society of Mayflower Descendants, Daughters of the Revolution, the social and other organizations of the city. The children of Dr. Albert and Margaret (Snow) Vander Veer thus trace through seven generations (they being the eighth) direct to a Hollander and an Englishman, collaterally to a Frenchman. But, as the military record of the Vander Veers shows, the commingling of blood has produced patriotic Americans.

8. DONART II, who had

9. AODH (HUGH), FROIM, who had

10. EOCHY (ARCHAIUS) KINUACHAIL, m. Ethas, 826, and had

11. ALPIN, 836, succeeded to the throne of the Scots, and laid claim to the throne of the Picts, A.D.833. He had two sons: Kenneth and Donald. The HAY BOOK claims that Alpin was the son of Eoch (EOCHY) IV and his Pictish wife, the Princess Urgusia, of Furgusia, dau. of Fergus, King of the Picts, Alpin's son, I2. KENNETH MacALPIN, reigned from 836 to 843. The warlike Picts offered no great resistance, perhaps submitting without resistance, to his claim to the throne by virtue of descent from their Princess Urgusia. Thus was united the races which formed the elements of the picturesque Scotch Highlander, and thus was the blood of the Picts and Scots transmitted to the dynasty of Kenneth MacAlpin, which continued as follows:-

He had two sons:- CONSTANTINE and Eth .

I3. CONSTANTINE II, son of Kenneth MacAlpin, was take captive by the Danes and beheaded in 878. He had

I4. DONALD II, killed at Fores in a struggle to subdue the Province of Moray. HE TRANSFERRED THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT FROM FORT TEVIOT TO SCONE. He had

I5. MALCOLM I, who succeeded his father on the throne and was slain by the Moray men two miles from Fores. He had

I6. KENNETH III, who m. a dau. of William Long-Espee, Duke of Normandy, by whom he had two children:- MALCOLM and Duncleda, who m. Kenneth, Thane of Lochabar, and was the mother of Banquo. He was assassinated by Lady Fenella, dau. of Cruichne, Earl of Angus, who was agent of disaffected claimants to the succession under the law of tanisty, which Kenneth abolished. His son,

17. MALCOLM II, succeeded on the death of Grim. His reign was disturbed by Uchtred, son of Waltheof, Earl of Northumberland. He was attacked when 80 years old (1034), by a ruffian, Aelgifu, near Glamis, and died three days later from the loss of blood. He settled his dominions upon his grandson, son of daughter,

18. PRINCESS BETHOC (Beatrix), m. Crynan (or Crimes, or Grimus), Chief of Athol, lay-abbot of Dunkeld and Abthane of the Western Isles Lord of the Isles, and had

19. DUNCAN I, KING OF SCOTLAND, d. 1039, m. Maud, dau. of Siward, and had three sons:-

MALCOLM, afterwards KING MALCOLM CAWN MOHR.

Donald Bane.

Melmare, Earl of Athol.

Duncan was slain by Macbeth, under the influence of his wife the Lady Gruach, the Lady Macbeth of Shakespeare, granddaughter of Kenneth II, who by her first husband Gilcomgain had a son Lulach, who d. 1058, leaving a line of claimants to the throne.

It is said, but not credited, that King Malcolm II put to death M'Boede (son of Boede, son of Kenneth III), brother of the Lady Gruach, and this caused the murder of King Duncan. His son,

20. MALCOLM III, surnamed CAWNMOHR, ALSO CAENMOR, was one of Scotland's

17. MALCOLM II, succeeded on the death of Grim. His reign was disturbed by Donbred, son of Maldred, Earl of Northumberland. He was attacked when 80 years old (1034), by a ruffian, Aedgiun, whose friends, and died three days later from the loss of blood. He settled his dominions upon his grandson, son of Duncan, her,

18. PRINCESS BEATRIX (Beatrix), m. Crynan (or Crinne, or Grimus), Chief of Athol, Lay-abbot of Dunkeld and Abthane of the Western Isles Lord of the Isles, and had

19. DUNCAN I, KING OF SCOTLAND, d. 1039, m. Sibyl, dau. of Siward, and had three sons:-

MALCOLM, afterwards KING MALCOLM CANM MORE.

Donald Bane.

Melmore, Earl of Athol.

Duncan was slain by Macbeth, under the influence of his wife the Lady Gruoch, the Lady Macbeth of Shakespeare, granddaughter of Kenneth IV, who by her first husband Gillcomgain had a son Lulach, who d. 1058, leaving a line of claimants to the throne.

It is said, but not credited, that King Malcolm II put to death M'Beathe (son of Boede, son of Kenneth III), brother of the Lady Gruoch, and this caused the murder of King Duncan. His son,

20. MALCOLM III, surnamed CANMORE, ALSO CANMORE, was one of Scotland's greatest sovereigns. He m.Margaret Atheling (ST.MARGARET), both of whom are mentioned above.

I7.....COLONEL GEORGE READE, IMMIGRANT ANCESTOR, who came to Virginia circa, I637. He m. ante I657 Elizabeth Martiau.

AMERICAN ANCESTOR COLONEL GEORGE READE, OF YORKTOWN, VIRGINIA

I7. COLONEL GEORGE READE, IMMIGRANT ANCESTOR, son of Robert and Mildred was b. at Linkenholt, Hampshire, England, and d. in York County, Virginia, his will being proved November 20, I67I. He came to Virginia in I637, and was made Secretary of the Colony in the same year. In I638 he was Acting Governor; in I649 Burgess for James City County, and again for Gloucester County, in December, I656. March I3, I657-58, he was elected a member of His Majesty's Council, and continued in this office until his death. He served in the militia with the rank of colonel. He m. Elizabeth Martiau, b. in I6--, d. in I687, of Yorktown, Virginia, dau. of Captain Nicholas Martiau. He was b. in France I59I, and d. I657, a naturalized citizen of England. Originally he was a Frenchman. He came to America in the "Francis Bonaventure", in I620. From I622 to I637 he was a justice of York for Kiskyache and a Burgess in the years I623, I63I, I633. His wife was Jane Berkeley, also Barkley, , whom he m. in I623. His will, dated March I, I656, recorded in York County, April 24, I657, divides his estate between his daughters, Elizabeth, wife of Colonel George Reade; Mary, wife of Lieutenant-Colonel John Scarbrook; and Sarah, wife of Captain William Fuller, one time Gover- of Maryland.

The will of Elizabeth, widow of Colonel George Reade, was proved January 24, I686-I687. The names of seven of their children have been preserved.

WILLIAM REED, ancestor of Mrs. John Franklin McDougall (Irene Gantt) was b. in 1745, and d. in North Carolina 1844. He changed his name from READE, or READ to REED, as was the case with many families who left Virginia. It has been stated by some authorities that the Reeds were of the Virginia family of Reade. Mrs. Pleasant Jordan Gantt, mother of Mrs. McDougall, claimed that William Reed, mentioned above, was of that family, and that in her voluminous records the connecting link could be found. There was a William Read who bought land in Bedford County, Virginia "at the head of Lick Run and Elk Creek" in 1774, and sold the said land in October, 1775 to Jacob Moon, of Albemarle County. Then in the County of Bedford there was a John Read (Reade), who made his will 3 June 1767, naming his son William among other children. This may be a clue to the ancestry of William Reed, who d. in North Carolina, and served in the Revolutionary War as a soldier on the roll of Captain John Summers' Company, Colonel Clark's 1st N.C. Battalion, enlisted September 8, 1778 for the War.

William Reed (Reade) m. (2) Elizabeth Walker (a Virginia name) b. ante 1770, d. 1844, m. 1793, dau. of Captain George Walker (b. 1745 and his wife Eleanor Hicks (b. 1752, m. 1767), and had

BLINCOE WADSWORTH REED, b. 1798, d. 1850, m. 1818 Marjorie Ann Ellis, b. 1801, d. 1838, and had

GEORGE WALKER REED, b. Jan 22, 1819, d. Jan. 11, 1894, m. Minerva Narcissus Estes, b. Feb. 25, 1833, d. Jan. 11, 1894, m. 1848, and had

FLORENCE MINERVA REED, b. March 6, 1857, m. August, 1877, Pleasant Jordan Gantt, b. Jan. 2, 1853, d. April 16, 1916, and had

Reade, with its variants Read, Reed and Reid, are surnames from the name "the red", a sobriquet given on account of the ruddy face or red color of the hair. Reid is a Scottish and North English variant. The name Godwin le Rede appears in the Hundred Rolls of County Suffolk in I273, and Roger le Rede appears on the Hundred Rolls of County Hereford in the same year. James amd Polly Riggins are the parents of Teresy (as her name is given in Jame's will dated 1842. You can obtain a copy of it by writing to GA Dept. of Archives of History Microfilm Dept., 330 Capito; Ave. Atlanta, GA 30334. The source I have says that James and Polly came from MD. throiugh SC and stayed there a while and were in Putman Co., GA by 1815. The will list all the children and thegirls spouces. There were 7 girls and 4 boys. The will list Thomas Barker as Teresy's husband. Tere is a rather large blue book in print on Pike Co., approxamately 8x11 in some of the libraries in Ga. Ihope this has been of help to yoy. If you would like the children' names just let me know. Its nice to have made the connection as we seem to be didtant cousins. Lucy

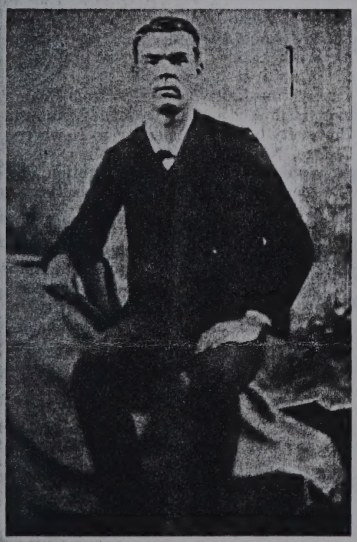
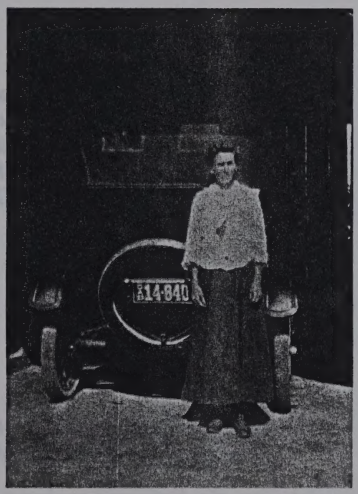
RIDLEY, WILLIAM PHILLIP AND ORA (COGGIN)

F601



William Phillip Ridley

William Phillip, "Buck," Ridley was born October 11, 1870 in Meriwether County. His parents were George W. Ridley (1833 – 1904) and Mowina Briley Ridley (1839 – 1882). He had one sister, Carrie, two brothers, N.O. and G. Ben, and one half brother, John David Magourit. About 1878 his family went to Texas for a couple of years and returned to Georgia in 1880 to settle in Pike County near



Ora Coggin Ridley

Weaver and Bluff Springs Camp Ground.

Will Ridley, a handsome man, was wise beyond his years at age 18, and he operated his father's general store and the Weaver Post Office located inside the store. The following is from an article in The Griffin Weekly News & Sun June 14, 1893. "Under the telephone wire outside Butler's Store in Weaver . . . lightning struck and instantly killed Walter Weaver, age 21, shocked Frank Buchanan and tore his shoes from his feet and passed along a telephone wire 300 yards to Ridley's Store and shocked a ring from the finger of Will Ridley, which before that time, was so tight that Mr. Ridley could hardly force it off."

William P. Ridley married Ora Etta Coggin on August 18, 1895 in Zebulon in a ceremony performed by Dr. C.F. Redding. Ora's father, Silas Sylvester Coggin (1849 – 1926), operated the store and post office at Beeks, Georgia. Her mother was Pherabie Jackson Coggin (1853 – 1920). Ora had one brother, Andrew, and one sister, Annie.

The young couple moved to Beeks and Will tried his hand at farming during hard times. He served as tax receiver for Pike County from 1897 – 98 and later worked for Pike County as bailiff, notary, draft registrar, and cattle inspector. About 1910 Mr. Ridley became one of the first RFD mail carriers in Williamson. He carried the mail by horse and buggy. His horse was so well trained that at the end of the route Will could take a nap allowing the horse to find its own way home.

Ora was talented with many homemaking skills — cooking, sewing and crocheting. She also did her share of hard work around the farm. Ora had a price possession, a life-size doll, which she always displayed above the mantel in their home located between Beeks and Williamson.

Will and Ora had four children, but two, a boy, Sylvester, and a girl died in infancy and are buried at the Coggin Cemetery. The other two were boys: Benjamin Azalee (1897 – 1926) and William Edward (1902 – 1966). Azalee married Pearle Wilbanks and was postmaster at Williamson. Ed married Pauline Pettett of Concord and he was a salesman for H.V. Kell Company. The Ridleys were members of the Methodist church in Williamson. Will died April 7, 1934 and Ora died the next year on August 2. They are buried at the Williamson Methodist Cemetery.

RIGGINS FAMILY

F602

Teresa Caroline Riggins, wife of Thomas Barker, was one of eleven children, four boys and seven girls, of James and Polly Riggins. The story has been told that James and Polly traveled from Maryland to South Carolina with only a cart, an ox, and a negro. The Riggins were in Putnam County, Georgia as early as 1815. James made his first land purchase in Pike County in January of 1829. Their first cabin, which was about two miles south of Flat Shoals, was blown away by a storm, but with hard work James rebuilt their home which was still standing as late as the 1950's near where Cleggs Bridge spanned the Flint river. James' will was written on January 12, 1842 and probated on July 4, 1842. His estate was left to his wife Polly and their children. The children of this union married into the following families: Spear, Justice, Barker, Bagwell, Dominick, Pilkenton, Alford, Irvin, Daniel, Williamson, and Brown. It is interesting to note that twenty-seven of James and Polly Riggins' grandchildren fought in the Civil War.

Two of James and Polly Riggins descendants who have been prominent in Pike County law enforcement in recent years are Billy and Astor Riggins.

Vivian H. Jordan,

I saw your listing under the surname Riggins for Pike County. I have two Riggins boys marrying two Alford sisters in Pike County in the 1830's and 1840's. First on 12/20/1832 Joshua H Riggins marries Winnifred Alford. Then on 1/13/1842 James Jefferson Riggins marries Nancy Ann Alford. Nancy Ann and Winnifred are sisters. Do you know if James Jefferson Riggins is the brother or Joshua H Riggins. Joshua H and Winifred have a son named James J Riggins.

I have heard that Joshua H Riggins' father was a James Riggins. I have seen a James Riggins in Early Pike County Census Records, but I have not proved that he is the father of Joshua H. If you have any more information on this family, I would appreciate a reply.

Your name was listed in the Pike Co., GA GAGenWeb site under Riggins.

I am a descendant of Joseph Williamson and Mary Ann Riggins Williamson who married 23 Dec 1841 in Pike Co., GA. My great grandparents were William Henry C. Williamson and Elizabeth Frances Newman Williamson Bailey; William's siblings: Joseph J. Williamson bn 1847, Pike Co., GA. who married Mary Ann Gore; Zechariah Taylor Williamson bn 1849, Pike Co., GA. who married Mary Ann Jordan; Jessie J.C.C.Williamson bn 1850 in Pike Co., GA. spouse unknown; Thomas Jefferson Williamson bn 21 Sep 1851 in Pike Co., GA who married (1) Dicie Alford and (2) Mattie Alford; and Warren William bn 1872 in Pike Co., GA., spouse unknown.

My grandfather was James Monroe Williamson bn bet. 1870-1876 in Pike Co., GA, son of William Henry C. Williamson and Elizabeth Frances Newman Williamson Bailey. His siblings were William Jackson Williamson bn 1864 in Pike Co., Nora Viola Williamson bn 1871 Molena, Pike Co., GA and married David W. Manley, Jr.; Julia Ann Williamson bn 1873 in Pike Co., GA. who married (1) Thomas Jefferson Williamson and (2) Lewis Birdsong; Nicie Matilda Williamson bn 1880 in Pike Co., GA. who married William Columbus Bailey; Earnest Teat Williamson bn 1880 in Pike Co., GA.; George Henry Williamson bn 1881 in Pike Co., GA; and Virginia Ellen Williamson bn 1885 in Pike Co., GA., who married Jordan M. McLeod in Pike Co., GA.

My grandmother, Elizabeth Frances Newman married George Tillman Bailey after the death of William Henry C. Williamson.

Do you have any information on the people listed above? Thank you.

Linda Baker
Oklahoma City, OK

Please let me know if there are errors and why you know they are incorrect....o.k.??? Haven't done that much personel research on the Riggins and have relied on others to a great extent. Please keep in touch. Do you know any more on this Mary Ann Jordan who m Zechariah Taylor Williamson????

Vivian Jordan Houston, TX

Linda: You have made a connection! Your Mary A. Riggins who m Joseph Williamson is a sister of my husband's 3rd great grdmother 'Tersa'(Theresa Caroline) Riggins, who m (some say his first name was John) Thomas Barker in 1834 in Pike Co., GA. Her father was James Riggins, mother was Polly (Mary) no known last name. Jame's will, dated 1842 lists all his children. ELEVEN!! This you can find in Pike Co., GA Court House.

In 2001 I had corres. with John Sauer of Bellville, TX. & in his e mail he states that he had two Riggins boys marrying two Alford sisters in Pike Co., GA. Joshua H. Riggins m Winnifred Alford 20 Dec 1832 and James Jefferson Riggins m Nancy Ann Alford 13 Jan 1842. (Two brothers m two sisters) He noted that Joshua H and Winifred Riggins have a son named James J. Riggins. John Sauer's UHL is johnws@alumni.utexas.net. Hope it is still current. I assume that he is decended from Joshua.

In a "mug" book on Pike Co., GA is a short write up on the Riggins family by Robert F. Jones, Jr. He states that Theresa was one of eleven and that 'the story goes' that they came from MD. to SC with only a cart, an ox and a negro. They were in Putnam Co., GA as early as 1815 and James made his first land purchase in Pike Co. in jan of 1829. Their first cabin was built ca two miles south of Flat Shoals was blown away by a storm but James rebuilt and it was still standing in 1950. This is Cleggs Bridge which spanned the Flint River. My husband says that he has never heard of Cleggs Bridge but since he grew up on the Flint River that it was probably the Flint River Bridge by now. He was b in Warm Springs, GA but grew up in Molena, GA close to the Flint Rv. His Dad was the Station Master for the Southern Railroad in Molena.

Children of James and Polly Riggins: (from will)

I have Riggins and Riggin in the area of MO and ILL, but not this line. My bunch did come thru Tenn on the way out of NC to MO and ILL. This is not a easy surname to work when you start to talk about the bunch from N.C. It is a nightmare with all the same naming!

I'm wondering if this James Riggins is son of William Powell Riggins born abt 1777 in NC. In his will there is mention of a son named James. William Powell or Powell Riggins is living in Callaway Co. MO on the 1830 census which is the time and place of James Riggins marriage to Elizabeth or Betty Haynes.

Court, do you have additional insights into this as if I'm correct William Powell or Powell Riggins is in your line?

These are the notes I have for James and Elizabeth Riggins:

I saw this posting myself and did answer it. I even had Maryellen ask me about it. I don't know how this James and Elizabeth connect to my line if they do at all. Yes I have both a James Josesph and William Powell or Powell Riggins from the Audrain, Boone and Cole Co's of MO and then two other brothers from Madson Co., ILL named John and Henry Riggin without the

S. We see it spelled both ways. Putnam is in the upper part of the state next to IA. I have seen the two that you are talking about before, but I just can't fit them in our lines. The closest that I can come to the names are John Miller Riggins and Eliza Louisa Henley married in Cole Co. in Jan of 1851, but as you can see the dates are off. It would not surprise me if they did connect as cousins down the line, but it is a good question how.. Thanks for the offer of the Gedcom.....Court

Golden Lyon II Genealogical Research

Last Updated 28 Aug 1998

This web site is an independent, on-line genealogy resource for studying related families of the Lower Eastern Shore of "Delmarva". Included are the counties of Kent and Sussex in Delaware, Caroline, Dorchester, Somerset, Wicomico, and Worchester counties in Maryland, Northampton and Accomack in Virginia. I have also done some studies in the Upper Shore area of Talbot and Queen Annes' counties. My interest is to share genealogical information and possibly do small research projects for individuals who may not have the resources or ability to travel to the area. Projects will be evaluated on a one by one basis. Studies are currently being done on the following family lines: Allen (of Sussex), Alexander, Bailey, Beavens, Bussells, Bosman, Cannon, Carey, Connaway, Cottman, Covington, Dixon, Donoho, Eborne, Fisher, Graham, Godfrey, Harriss, Higman (Hickman), Hinds, Horsey, Jackson(of Somerset), King, Lamee, Layton, Laws, London, Lowe (of Somerset), Lowber, Loughland (Lofland), Lucas, Manlove, McGrath, Outterbridge, Pollitt, Polk, Pope, Rickards, Raglin, Rencher, Richardson, Riggin, Sipple, Swiggett, Trevitt (Truitt), Turpin, Turville, Walker, Wright, Willey, Wilson, Waller, Wimbrow.

For over 17 years I have been doing research on the lower Eastern Shore, visiting courthouses, archives, libraries, graveyards and other family members collecting information dedicated to the future publishing of my manuscript, Allied Families of the Delmarva Peninsula.

*The Golden Lyon was a tract of land in early Somersett County, Maryland purchased by one of my original ancestors in this country, Teague Riggin [c.1670]. He came with at least one brother, Darby Riggin, who settled in Accomack Co., Va., and very likely a younger brother John Riggin (of Marumsco). They probably emmigrated from Ireland. The Golden Lyon became their "Home Plantation." The family's other scattered tracts, surrounding lands such as Lyon's Whelp, Riggin's Mines, Riggin's Content, Hilliard's Discovery, Teague's Down, Seaman's Choice, Father and Mother's Gift, Ambrosia, to name a few, comprised over 2000 acres in the area near what is now known as Crisfield, Marion, Shelltown and Rehobeth, Maryland.

from Ireland. The Golden Lyon became their "Home Paradise." The family's other scattered tracts, not dwelling lands such as Lyon's Rock, Ingram's Rest, Riggin's Content, Hilltop's Discovery, Teague's Chase, Sconnor's Choice, Father and Mother's Gift, Hardware, to name a few, comprised over 3000 acres in the area near what is now known as Chatfield, Marion, Shelltown and Rehoboth, Maryland.

On a CD in our local library "Marriage Records:Maryland, North Carolina, Virginia 1624 - 1915" I researched the Riggins. I found one James Riggins and Mary Howard married April 8,1791. Sec. 1V Ch. 57, Washington Va.

This seems a little far-fetched to be ours.Will research these people as much as possible to narrow down possibilities. -- Was wondering if you knew of anyone that had found Our James Riggins and Polly's marriage records.

Dear Ms Robinson:

I tried sending an E-Mail but it was returned. Just hope that this reaches you!!

You are probably related to my husband somehow or other for we are looking for Jordans(Jourdans) and Riggins!!

The place where we are stuck is the father of John T.(homas??) Jordan b 1806. We find a Benjamin Jordan, 74 b ?? listed with John T. and his family in 1850 Pike Co., GA and there is where we stop.

The Riggins come into the family through Nancy Matilde Barker who m a Jordan. Nancy's mother was Theresa(Resa) Caroline Riggins.

Would you send your Jordans and Riggins and maybe we can put something together???

Hope to hear from you, soon.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Dan Boswell Jordan (Vivian)

J,Lovely to hear from you. First off I didn't lose my husband, yet.... But on the rest Gee, I loved all the info. I had just seen the James Riggins will listed in Pike county and was thinking of sending for it.(Now what, my print changed and I don't know how.) I wanted to back up and ask you - they didn't give an amount to send to the archives for the copy. Just said send a small check. (My small amt. and their small Amt might differ.
I'm descended down thru the Williamson line. A close 2nd. cousin of mine made a trip back early 1970's and picked up the Riggins/Williamson connection. Right after that she died (hemoraged to death in the hospital the night her baby son was born) and I inherited her box of "papers". Thank goodness no one else wanted them. Right after that I got house bound with an Alzhiemers parent which lasted over 15 years. She died I-1/2 years ago and I'm just beginning to branch out a little. We've only had a computer a few months and I just love the connections I'm finding. More later Doris: How nice to hear from you. I haven't worked on the Riggins line for a long time but believe I may be able to help a little.

Back in Sept. of 1997 I heard in answer to a query from 'Lucy' L1809@aol.com and she said this: "James and Polly Riggins are the parent of Teresy (Theresa). The will of James Riggins 1842, may be obtained from the GA State Archives. The names of the children are listed as well as their spouses" Your Mary is listed with Joseph Williamson as her spouse.

Another reference that I found is in the wonderful 'Mug' books that the various counties have put out where people have put in their family history.(for a fee, of course) This excerpt was put in the book by Robert F. Jones, Jr. "James and Polly had eleven children, four boys and seven girls. The STORY is told that they came from MD to SC with only a cart, ox and a Negro. They were in Putnam Co., GA as early as 1815. James made his first land purchase in Pike Co., GA in Jan. 1829. Their first cabin was two miles south of Flat Shoals, the first cabin was blown away by a storm but rebuilt and was still standing in the late 1850's."

The Riggins are my husband's line through the Jordan's. Dan was b in Warm Springs, GA but was raised in Molena, GA which is close to Thomaston, GA. Can't close this without asking you are you related somehow to a Doris Irons that just last month lost his husband?. They lived in Gilmore, TX. Vivian J.
